TWO SIDES TO IT.

The British press has been hitter toward the striking miners in the Welsh coal mines and these strikers have been roundly denounced for their apparent lack of patriotism at a time of pressing need. From information furnished by consular reare two sides to this story. It seems that the mining companies have been the aeroplane. making exorbitant profits, due to the excessive demand for their product, and the miners simply are demanding a share of these profits. The Insoles company, for instance, whose average annual output is 800,000 tons, dropped during the year ending June 30, 1915, to 545,000 tons, but its annual dividend was increased from six per cent to ten per cent because its profit per ton was increased from fifteen cents to twenty-nine cents, or nearly double. The Fernhill collieries continued an annual sixteen per cent dividend on common stock on an output of 118,000 tons less than the year before, which represented an increase of fore, which represented an increase of profits from $156,000 to $191,000 and profit per ton from twenty-three cents to thirty-four cents. ### CHECKING THE SUBMARINE.

England apparently has made considerable progress in her efforts to eleck the operations of hostile submarines. For instance, the question often is asked as to why the German submarine fleet confines and concentrates its affairs apparently on merchant vessels, while making no attempt to hinder the transportation of great bodies of troops from England to France. This query is being re-England apparently has made conleast being approximately reached.
