Mr. and Mrs. Martin Entertain-What was undoubtedly one of the nost delightful social functions of the Thanksgiving season was that at the pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. Ar-thur L. Martin Wednesday evening, when several couples assembled upon invitation to play Five Hundred and banquet. The decorations were a fea-ture of the occasion, and created much favorable comment from the guests. The reception hall and parlors were bedecked with Oregon grape and multicolored autumn leaves, wnile chrysanthemums in profusion were in evidence throughout. In the dining room ferns predominated, while the illumination was by two strands of incandescent electric lights of various hues extending from corner to corne and centering immediately over spacious table especially arranged to receive twenty covers, the number laid for the occasion. The banquet, for such it was, consisted of four courses, daintily served by the hostess, assisted by the Misses Scott, and was greatly appreciated by the guests. Following the midnight repast music and dancing. Miss Helen May Scott rendered a number of vocal selections, ac companied by Miss Naomi Scott or the violin, each number being heartily encored. The honors of the evening at the card-play were awarded to Mr. H. I. Price and Mrs. S. B. Taylor. The consolation prizes went to Mrs. E. K. Piasecki.
