A MAN IN DALLAS

A man's record and that of his forbears speaks for him. Here's Fred J. Holman's "Bertillon": born in the Luekiamute valley, five miles southwest of Monmouth, April 18, 1878; parents moved to Dallas in 1888 where father bought half interest in Dallas tannery and was pastor of the Baptist church; family returned to farm in 1885; father lost the use of his right arm in a fall, the indirect cause of his death in 1892; after his father's death Fred's mother rented the farm again and moved to Independence; Fred attended school in Independence two years and then was a student in the Oregon State Normal school in Monmouth for two years; Mrs. Holman and Samuel H. Tetherow, pioneer of 1845, were married and Mr. and Mrs. Tetherow returned to the Tetherow place on the Luekiamute where Fred again attended school, finishing the eighth grade; for two years Fred was drug clerk and assistant postmaster at Falls City under M. L. Thompson; for three years he was clerk in the Bryan-Lucas Lumber company's store; four years he was with the Coast Range Lumber company where he worked up from planer feeder to assistant foreman; he accepted position as book-keeper and assistant postmaster in the W. L. Tooze, Sr., branch store in Black Rock; was made manager of store when N. Selig purchased same from W. L. Tooze, Sr.; was made postmaster of Black Rock, serving four years. During his four years in the Black Rock postoffice he was not examined by a postoffice inspector. Mr. Holman was elected county treasurer in 1914 and Auditor Wilson of Corvallis gave him a very creditable report at the end of the year, 1915. Fred's mother was the daughter of Rev. David Hubbard, who crossed the plains by ox team from Illinois in 1853. His father, the Rev. Preston Holman, crossed the plains from Missouri in 1848 with his parents. When the Civil war broke out Rev. Holman enlisted as a private in Company A, First Oregon Infantry, and while at Fort Walla Walla was promoted to sergeant, which office he held until the close of the war. Fred's father's father, James Holman, generally known as "Uncle Jim," was elected as representative to the Oregon Territorial legislature in 1851 and served until 1853. He was appointed to fill a vacancy in the sheriff's office in 1855 and was elected to that office in 1856 and re-elected in 1858 and 1860. He was re-elected as representative in 1863.
