

BUILDS MOTHER'S TOMB

R. L. DASHIELL TRAVELS TO KENTUCKY TO DO IT.

Through 70 Years The Memory of His Dead Parent Was Grave To Dallas Man.

R. L. Dashiell will return in a day or two from Louisville, Ky. He writes from Chicago that he will be back in time to vote.

That would be an item for The Observer's Terse Tales but it would cover up a good "story." The story, as it came over the wire from Kentucky follows:

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 30.

Returning to Louisville after seventy years to honor the memory of his mother, "The Beautiful Lady on the Hill," R. L. Dashiell, a native of Louisville, Kentucky, is on his way home, after attending the dedication of a monument to his mother on the old burying ground of the Dashiell family, just beyond the "Cabbage Patch," made famous by Alice Hoan Rice.

For two weeks Mr. Dashiell, old and grey-headed, superintended excavation on the site of the cemetery of seventy years ago, which later was the site of a fort built by General Don Carlos Buell at the approach of Bragg's troops from the south. The old man confided his secret to none of the residents of the vicinity, hence aroused much curiosity. At the end of that time there was excavated the remains believed to be those of his mother, Mrs. D. W. Dashiell.

The expense of the trip, location, excavation and monument was borne jointly by Mr. Dashiell and his brother, Ben F. Dashiell, of Spokane, Wash. Dashiell's father was Dr. D. W. Dashiell, a noted physician in the early days of Kentucky. When the Oregon man was only 6 years old, his mother, the central figure in the famous old play, "The Beautiful Lady on the Hill," and said to have been one of the most beautiful women in Kentucky, died. She was buried in the orchard near the old Dashiell place and a massive brick wall, forty feet square, was built around the burying ground. A year later, taking his two little boys, the physician went west. This was in 1843. The aged visitor to his birthplace recalls his pilgrimage to the west in an oxen train.

A few weeks ago, in pursuance to the plan long ago made, Mr. Dashiell came here and consulted an attorney about finding the burial plot on the old homestead. Holding a deed for the plot forty feet square, which had long since passed into other hands, Dashiell took possession of the ground. County Surveyor Russell Gaines was on hand to survey the site in preparation for litigation which may follow. The old homestead had changed hands a number of times and the site of the graveyard was dug and plowed over by Union soldiers when they erected entrenchments on the approach of the Confederates to Louisville during the Civil war. The old stone wall had been covered over.

Much history is connected with the Dashiell place. The house, built in 1835, still stands. In it were entertained at different times, Henry Clay, President Zachary Taylor, George D. Prentice and other Kentucky notables. The monument, dedicated by two Louisville pastors, has the following inscription:

"Erected to the Memory of My Mother, Mrs. D. W. Dashiell, 'The Beautiful Lady on the Hill.'"

El Paso, Texas, October 24, 1916
Well, I'm still here, because I'm here, because I'm here. The sun still shines bright and warm throughout the day, although the nights are beginning to be a trifle chilly, and we had rain during the middle of the month. As I write this the windows are all open, and one goes without a coat or even a sweater during the day. Steam heat, or any sort of heat, is as yet unneeded. The dust blows, the soot settles, and the hills of Mexico stand out sharply against the blue of the sky, even as when I wrote last.

Army activities are quite as prominent, too, as they were a month ago. Motor trucks, cycle cars and mule wagons, etc., are constantly seen on the streets—all busy in their respective duties of maintaining the camps and carrying on the work of protecting the border. The Sixth Infantry, of which my brother is a member, is still camped at El Valle, Mexico, almost 200 miles south of the border. There seems to be no hope of their being relieved by other regular troops stationed here.

Quite a large exposition has been held here for the past couple of weeks. Exhibits from neighboring states and as far away as Kansas have been shown, and caused the place to be unusually busy. I do not know if I mentioned before how very busy this town is. I have to look as carefully to cross a street here as I would in Portland, and the jitney service is tremendous. They use Fords mostly, and they dash around the corners like bees.

There is another type of person occasionally seen on the streets here who always claims my undivided attention when he passes me, and that is the cow-boy. He is the real thing, I tell you.

I wish to say that I am beginning to enjoy the Texas cooking now. I presume that homesick feeling had everything to do with my making the statement that they didn't know how to cook here. One would meet that condition anywhere they went, I presume. I have met a great many nice people here, and one of the girls, who is a Texan, is particularly interesting. She wished to see the big film production, "The Birth of Texas," recently, and asked me to go with her, and I went, thinking I might learn something of the history of Texas. The enthusiasm of the crowd was demonstrated by cheering throughout the picture, and I found myself clapping and exclaiming as busily as any native. The absence of Mexicans at the theater was noticeable.

Recently a very large dam was completed and dedicated at Elephant Butte, near here. It is said to be second largest in the world, being 35 miles long, and 7 years will be required to fill it. I presume that is because water is so scarce in this country. I cannot imagine any dam in Oregon filling that slowly. Can you?
PEARL OWINGS.

To the Voters of Polk County:

My attention has been called to a number of rumors regarding the relations of our company with Mr. S. B. Taylor, who is a candidate for county surveyor.

In justice to Mr. Taylor, we wish to correct any false impressions, by merely stating:

That, Mr. Taylor has been employed by us to do practically all of our engineering and surveying work since 1907, that his service has been very satisfactory, and he is still engaged in work for this company.

GEORGE T. GERLINGER.

Society

This is Hallowe'en Time.

Hallowe'en parties are in full swing and bid fair to continue to the end of the week. This merry celebration is not without its pleasures for the grown-up folks too, for it lends inspiration for many parties for them as well as the younger belles and beaux. Nearly every party this week will have its suggestive decorations and Dallas maids and matrons and men may prepare themselves to just love those "spooky" pumpkins and black cats, or else be awfully "skeered."

Militia Dance Enjoyed.

The militia dance Saturday evening in the armory was a very enjoyable party. Dancing started at nine. Boy scouts were in charge of the men's cloak rooms and served punch. Rice and Williams orchestra played. The pretty fall and winter gowns of the women of the city and outside guests and the uniformed men made a pretty picture.

And Why Does Big Business Choose the Royal?

"Big Business" is big because it is organized and managed for tomorrow, and next year and years ahead.

"Big business buys and uses Royal typewriters.

Big business can't afford to have the "trading in" nuisance every often in the typewriter department.

Big business knows the leaking time when work is held up while typewriters are being repaired.

Big business knows the time lost when operators have to "fight" their machines.

Big business knows that the Royal is instantly adjusted to the personality of the operator, that the Royal has long life built into it, that the Royal does all a typewriter should do.

The Royal writes, bills and charges, and writes cards—without a single attachment, without a change, without a stop.

Right there in your office the Royal will not only save you money in the long run, but will go a long way toward helping you to make more money.

It won't take more than a few minutes to see the Royal and let it be demonstrated. That's the quickest way to get the facts.

Whether you use one or a hundred typewriters, whether you are now considering a purchase or not, get acquainted with the Royal. Telephone us and we'll come. Or drop us a note. No obligation whatever for you—we'll thank you.
