PORTLAND POSTOFFICE (Salem Journal)

State politics are to be shaken to the bottom in the controversy over the appointment of John C. Young as postmaster at Portland.

Mr. Young is a poor man with a large family, lives in Portland and has several of his children married there, and all are respectable.

He is not one of the old first families, but blew into Oregon from Salt Lake City about 20 years ago, and has never stolen anything.

Hence he is highly unfit to hold any public position, in the eyes of the old political machine, if they happen to want the place.

Above all other sins, he is a friend of Senator Bourne, a Statement Oner, a reform Republican, and a man of brains and ability.

It happens he got the appointment at the hands of President Roosevelt, and the machine push senators will fight his confirmation.

As the United States senator has the right by courtesy to name the postmaster in his home city, Bourne has the best of it.

It is to be regretted that one of the officeholding hierarchy cannot have the Portland post-office, and that it must go to one of the poor common people like Young.

Some mistake about that. A man who has been in office at least 20 years should have the place. This passing such things around to a man who has not been an officeholder is a mistake.

However, Young might be honest and competent. That would go far to palliate the offence of naming a people's champion for postmaster.
