Weekly Reports From the Various College Fraternal Societies.

Miss Isla Laughlin, who is a member of the class of Feb. '08, has begun her pedagogical career even before the day of her graduation. She took her departure Tuesday for Hood River where she has an intermediate position. Miss Laughlin's work in school assures her future success.

Miss Effie Galbreath has taken her departure for Gilliam county where she will begin school immediately. Although Miss Galbreath is a member of the class that is to be graduated on Feb. 1, she has been forced to take up her duties at once, thus being deprived of the pleasures attending commencement festivities. She leaves our school with excellent recommendations.

On Saturday evening, January 23, the pupils of the Training Department gave a three part program.

The first was a cantata,—"Peggy's Dream," which was given by the 3rd and 4th grades. These children proved to be delightful entertainers, and showed excellent training with their voices both in solo and chorus work. The cast of characters follows:

Peggy—Gaynelle Shore.
Bopeep—Marion Macdonald
Old Mother Hubbard—Gertrude Rogers

Little Miss Muffit—Wilda Fuller
Little Boy Blue—Guy Sacre
Old King Cole—Jay Butler
Jack—Bruce Rogers
Jill—Mary Chute
Lady Bunny—Grace Parker
Sir Thomas (cat)—Charles Strong
Brownie—Jim Crowley
Fairy—Myrtle Hyde
Brownie band etc.,—other members of the 3rd and 4th grades.

The second and third parts were a cantata, "A Merry Company" and a drill—"Sash Drill", both of which were given by the 5th 6th 7th and 8th grades. In the former, individual parts were taken by Aileen Hosner, who made an excellent Captain of the Cadets; by Lora Chute, a mischievous member of the company, and Claud Boyle a deserter, who certainly furnished much amusement; by Norman Crowley, Ranie Burkhead and John Nelson the policemen who "knew their business" and very cleverly showed it; Winifred Parrish, Emma Parker and Harry Haley as 1st 2nd and 3rd speakers, each of whom did well. The chorus was made up by the other pupils in these grades.

The latter—the Sash Drill—was a very pretty exercise by seven girls; their parts were gracefully taken and the effect was pleasing. Those who took part in this were, Amy Chaney, Bell Rogers, Loette Shore, Emma Parker, Delphia Hartzog, Mildred Force and Muriel Boyle.

The audience certainly considered the evening well spent and many were made to recall their own old school days.

Several pupils were unable to get to school during the high water. Even after the flood was over, Emerson and Madge Groves were detained several days by washouts across the river.

Two Entertainments.

Holders of Season Tickets in the Citizen Entertainment Course will be pleased to learn that the committee has secured two concerts for the near future. The Gamble Concert Party will appear on the evening of Feb. 5, and the Williams Dixie Jubilee Singers on March 12.

The personnel of the Gamble

Party is the same as that when they were here in concert last year; Mr. Ernest Gamble, basso; Miss Verna Page, violin; Mr. Sam Lamberson, piano. This will be the second return of the company to Monmouth, the first appearance having occurred three years ago. An entirely new program will be rendered.

There was great disappointment last year in the Negro Jubilee company which gave a concert in the Citizens Course. It was called the Tennessee Jubilee Singers and came highly recommended. The company gave a fair concert, but it was so much inferior to that given the year before by the Williams company that it was poor by comparison.

The genuine Williams Dixie Jubilee company will appear this time and a crowded house is assured. They number eight people, evenly divided into male and female quartets. Their varied and interesting program consists of plantation songs, popular and classic selections in solo, quartet and chorus.

It will probably be the best chance to hear this famous company as their success has been so great they must cut down the number of their concerts in the smaller places.

The committee is also negotiating for a lecturer of national reputation.

Symptoms of Tuberculosis.

The symptoms of tuberculosis are a dry, short, interrupted, hoarse cough, which the sick animals manifest, especially in the morning at feeding time, still more after somewhat violent exertion. At first these animals may be full-blooded and lay on a considerable amount of fat when well fed. As the disease progresses they grow thin and show more and more those appearances which indicate diseased nutrition, such as a staring, lusterless, disheveled coat, dirty, tense skin, which appears very pale in those regions free from hair. The temperature of the skin is below normal. The loss of fat causes sinking of the eyes in their sockets. They appear swimming in water, and their expression is weak. The cough is more frequent, but never, or very rarely, accompanied with discharge. The body continues to emaciate even with plenty of food and a good appetite, so that the quantity of milk is small. At times in the early stages of the disease, still more in the later stages, the diseased animals manifest considerable tenderness when pressure is applied to the front or sides of the chest, by coughing, moaning, etc. Often all symptoms are wanting in spite of the existence of the disease. A disease so varied in its attack on the different organs of the body and in the extent of the disease process must necessarily lead to mistakes when diagnosis is attempted by the ordinary means of examination. The tuberculin test, which is marvelously accurate in its indications, has been almost universally adopted for the detection of tuberculosis.
