Mr. Harriman is quoted as saying the other day: "The great trouble in this country is that railroad men do not talk enough before the public. You boys say I don't talk enough for the newspapers. As a matter of fact, I talk almost every day." Yes, Mr. Harriman talks considerably, and he turns out to be a genial sort of man and brother, but as to railroads, does he never, or even hardly ever,—tell a fib?—Ex.
