Shower Party.

Last Tuesday evening when Miss Linnie Murphy returned from a business trip to Portland she found about 25 of her friends gathered at the home of her parents for the purpose of giving her a surprise shower in honor of her approaching marriage.

She was presented with a beautiful silver fruit basket, a drawn work linen dolly and a Shakesperian birthday book with the names of all the guests written in it.

Games and pleasant pastimes were the order of the evening. Among the interesting features of the evening was an Indian marriage ceremony.

Delicious refreshments were served among which was the brides cake with its usual complement of fortunes, causing a great deal of merriment.

At a late hour the clear notes of the piano rang out the tune of Auld Lang Syne and all joined in singing that old familiar song and they departed for their homes declaring themselves to have passed a most enjoyable evening and expressing a hope that Miss Linnie would have a long and happy life.

Died

A Truthful Scholar.

I met an honest boy this morning," said a man who is fond of children. "He was a little round faced, blue eyed chap with a stack of books under his arm, going to school as fast as his feet would carry him. 'Do you like to go to school, lad?' I asked him. 'No, thir,' he lisped, giving me one brief honest look and hurrying on past. Most children would have said yes, to make a hit with you, but this boy was not that kind."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A BRAVE LEAGUE MARE.

When Flung to Death She Saved Herself and Her Colt.

A man of the name of Walker, who lived in Mansfield, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., about 1857, bought a black mare in Canada. After having her a few years he sold her to a minister, who had her bred. When her colt was about five months old the minister emigrated to the west and shipped the mare and colt at Buffalo on a vessel for Chicago with himself and family.

The boat encountered a terrific gale soon after leaving Buffalo and came near going to pieces. Everything that in any way was thought to relieve the danger was thrown overboard. Among the rest were the mare and colt, with a number of other horses. The boat finally weathered the storm and arrived safely at Chicago.

The minister was repaid for his mare and colt. He wrote Mr. Walker about it and said, although he received ample pay for the mare and colt, it nearly broke his heart when he saw them struggling in the water, where they must shortly drown in the waves of old Lake Erie.

Soon after this Mr. Walker received a letter from the man of whom he had bought the mare in Canada, saying he was thunder-struck one morning to find the black mare, with a fine colt by her side, standing by the old barn door. How she got there was the puzzle. Had Mr. Walker sold her to some one in Canada or how was it that she came back home?

Finally the thing was explained. The boat happened to be somewhere near where the mare was raised, and when she was thrown overboard she must by some sense have found out she was near her old home, started that way and was followed by her colt. The man said he would never let her again be taken from the farm if he could help it, but was willing to pay for her. How it was at last settled I never learned, but many old residents of Cattaraugus county will remember the circumstance, which was considered a remarkable happening.—Em Pierce in Our Dumb Animals.
