THE RIGHTS AND WRONGS OF CHILDHOOD

The keynote of the newer world's attitude to the child will be thoroughness, which means enlightened and efficient justice. The state will put away the uncertain and tinkering methods which it has heretofore employed in dealing with the child. England has introduced a system of old age pensions, which is peculiarly revolting to those who have never been distressed by the spectacle of men thrown to the ash-heap after twenty or thirty or forty years of faithful service in the industrial army.

Some day a wisely far-seeing state will introduce a system of child pensions or child bonuses. Under present economic conditions, child-labor cannot be prevented by laws—even when loosely drawn and lightly enforced. In the event of the breadwinner of the family being lost through death or desertion, the state ought to allow the needed subsidy to the home in order that the child may be kept in school or in the home and be kept away from industry. Through what might be called child pensions, which would really be home pensions, the state can prevent child-labor and maintain the integrity of the home of the widow or deserted wife.—Stephen S. Wise, Ph. D., in the Pacific Monthly for August.

To Build Greenhouse

J. M. McDonald will erect a greenhouse on his property in South Monmouth this fall. Mr.

McDonald has been inspecting the latest mode's in greenhouse architecture and will build on modern lines. He will construct a small house at first and as the business demands more space, he will add to it. This will fill a long felt want of this part of Oregon. There is a large amount of early vegetables brought here from California and Portland.

It is to be hoped that Mr. McDonald will meet with sufficient encouragement to enable him to build a large greenhouse by spring.

Trip to Rockaway Beach.

On Monday morning, July 26, Mr. Chute and party, consisting of his two daughters, Blanch and Lora, Velma and Gertrude Hefley, started for Rockaway Beach (which is 7 miles north of the base line.) They drove through Dallas and about four miles over the hills toward Salt creek where they camped for dinner. Then on through Buell, over the hills to the Yamhill river, then up the river about two miles to Mr. Thorp's fine home where we camped all night. Tuesday morning drove on through the Grand Ronde and over the summit about three miles; stopped for dinner, then on through riego and Beaver and camped fourteen miles this side of Tillamook City, in a light but steady rain. Wednesday morning on through Tillamook, which is a thriving little city, on to Bay City seven miles west, where we left our load, consisting of household supplies for E. E. Borneman. Here we fed and rested our team, then on over the rocks past Hobsonville and Garibaldi to the beach, then north on the beach five miles to Rockaway beach; which is being platted and sold in lots for a summer resort. This is a beautifully situated spot on the finest beach on the Oregon coast. We stopped four days visiting, fishing and hunting shells, with Borneman, who is foreman on this place, and his family having a fine time. Then started home on Aug. 2d. Drove through Bay City, got four fine salmon and on through Tillamook and Beaver and camped for the night. Tuesday morning found one horse so lame we could not travel, so I doctored the horse until noon, then drove on ten miles with the horse no better. We camped for the night and hunted up a blacksmith shop, pulled off the shoe and dug out some gravel, replaced the shoe and next day drove home. C.

How the Culprit Was Detected.

Of a certain Harrow master whom Mr. Tollemache in his reminiscences refers to as Mr. Y. the following story is told. Dr. Vaughan was master of Harrow at the time: "Mr. Y.—I am sorry, Dr. Vaughan, to have to report to you two of your monitors for drinking. Dr. V.—This is a very serious charge. When and where did it happen? Mr. Y.—This afternoon in a public house in Finner. Dr. V.—Did you catch them flagrante delicto? Mr. Y.—No, Dr. Vaughan, I was in my study. Dr. V.—But surely you cannot possibly have seen from your study to Finner? Mr. Y.—I have a strong telescope. Dr. Vaughan, Dr. V.—But how can you tell that it was not water they were drinking? Mr. Y.—It was gin and water. I noticed a sediment of sugar at the bottom of their glasses.

Between Tears and Laughter.

"Do you ever think, George, dear," said she, and her voice was soft and low, as befitting the perfect beauty of the night, "do you ever think how closely true happiness is allied with tears?" "I don't believe I ever do," admitted George dear, "but I will, if you like." "Yes," she went on, gazing up into his face, and her lips were very close to his, "when one is truly and wholly happy, George, dear, there is but little to divide a smile and a tear." "Well, that's a fact," assented George dear. "But I never thought of it before. After all, there's nothing but the nose."—London Answers.
