

DETAIL OF THE EXPOSITION GARDENS AT ALASKA-YUKON-PACIFIC EXPOSITION.

At the bases of all of the buildings of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition are great thickets of rhododendron, the state flower; the cactus dahlia, which is the official flower of the exposition, and of other bright colored blooms. Much of the native cover of Douglas fir and the rank growth of Washington fern have also been left, and as a result the landscaping features of the fair will be as notable and beautiful as any other. The picture shows a cove of rhododendron and fir near the European building. Across the Cascades is the Oriental Exhibits building, which is similarly treated. The rhododendrons of the Pacific northwest, both in variety and perfection of growth, are unapproachable. This magnificent race of flowering shrubs is found in various parts of America, but botanists agree that it is at its most splendid development in the state of Washington.

DOWN AT THE LAKE SHORE AT THE ALASKA-YUKON-PACIFIC EXPOSITION.

The tracks of the Northern Pacific railroad, which run through the grounds of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, offered rather a problem to the engineers who had the laying out of the grounds. They finally overcame it by means of viaducts and subways, and the rustic bridge seen in the picture is one of the happy results. It leads from the heart of the grounds, near the pumping station, across the tracks to the banks of Lake Washington, which offer free the finest picnic grounds in the state. Here thousands of persons during the fair season will discuss their luncheons, parties of the sort being encouraged by the exposition management.

THE FORESTRY BUILDING FROM THE DOME AT THE ALASKA-YUKON-PACIFIC EXPOSITION.

From the high dome of the central government building at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition can be had a magnificent view of the Forestry building and beyond it Lake Washington and its wooded shores. The fir trees which stand in such profusion are a part of the native cover of the fair grounds, a forest of giant trees having been removed to make room for the exhibit buildings. In the foreground of the picture is to be seen the Washington state building.

Sartoris Monstrosities.

There are men we meet every day who take such sartorial liberties as almost drive one to despair. We have to tolerate such monstrous combinations as brown boots and frock coats, silk hats and lounge suits and frock coats and bowlers, and we are even nerving ourselves to the expectation of seeing a kilted highlander in a silk "topper."—London Outfitter.

Practical.

"A young man has telegraphed me that he has just wedded my daughter."
"I hope he's a good practical man."
"I guess he is. He wired me collect."—Kansas City Independent.

Origin of "Bonfire."

Stow, referring to the "bonifiers" which the citizens of London were wont to make in the streets on "the vigils of festival days and on the same festival days in the evenings after the sunne setting every man bestowing wood or labour towards them" and which were an occasion of feasting and merriment, says that "these were called bonifiers as well of good amitie amongst neighbours, that, being before at controuersie, were there by the labours of others, reconciled, and made of bitter enemies, loving friends, as also for the vertue that a great fire hath to purge the infection of the ayre."—London Globe.

Housekeeping in Papua.

European housekeeping in Papua is charmingly simple. Everything arrived in a tin, for the most part ready for use. Meat, milk, butter, vegetables—all stood in tins in neat rows in the storeroom. A diet of tinned stuffs grew rather monotonous at times, but we were able occasionally to vary it. Sometimes a man would arrive with a live turtle, which he would sell for two sticks of tobacco, costing threepence. The wretched turtle would be killed and cut up, but would still insist on quivering in a most realistic manner even when placed on the fire to cook. Then, too, if the season was a good one, the kitchen would be found lined with joints of wallabies, and it would be hard to know what to do with so much fresh meat.—Wide World Magazine.

He Was Guilty.
The great Irish agitator, Daniel O'Connell, was at one time defending a man accused of murder at Clonmel. The circumstantial evidence was so strong against the prisoner that the jury had already determined upon their verdict of guilty, when the man supposed to have been murdered was brought into court, alive and unharmed. The jury were desired to return their verdict at once, and they did so, but it was one of guilty.
"What?" exclaimed the astonished judge. "What does this mean? If the man has not been murdered how can the prisoner be guilty?"
"Please, your honor," said the foreman, "he's guilty. He stole my bay mare three years ago."—Omaha World-Herald.
