O. M. Lehman of Pleasant Valley, some five or six miles West of Monmouth, was doing business in town Saturday and made the Herald Office a pleasant call.

Changes are continually taking place and among those affecting this neighborhood was that of William Fugate who has traded his fine farm here for property in Salem. Mr. Fugate expects to move to that city in about a month. J. C. Clearwater is the person who secured the Fugate property.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Richardson, Jr., of Independence were Monmouth visitors, Monday and visited the Herald office for a short call. Mrs. Richardson has served time at the case as typo, and hence, feels at home in a print shop, especially here as she has been called upon several times to help in the Herald office. She also informed us that her father, Rev. J. R. N. Bell of Corvallis, had recently returned from a visit to the old ruins of Old Mexico and other places, which he and other parties from this part of Oregon had taken the trip to inform themselves upon. We understand that Mr. Bell will give Lectures upon what he saw sometime in the near future.

There is money to be made in Oregon at dairying, and it is not necessary to own a large tract of land to gain a competency for your labor. The following is from the Sheridan Sun; "V. E. Fink has established a good record for his cows, three of them doing remarkably well. Beside his milk and butter for home use these three cows returned a yield of $49.45 in cream for January. The feed, during that time in connection with hay has been mostly kale which was fed to them green from the field."
