The office devil came in one day this week, in a slightly excited manner exclaiming: "Landlord Hampton has a new pair of shoes and said they were the first ones in three years, and he wanted to get them in the paper," but we draw the line they are too big.

Frank Groshong of Corvallis, accompanied by Lester and Nathan D. Vail, was in town Sunday, on his return home from a trip to the coast. Some three weeks ago the Herald published an account of the Groshong brothers starting for Alsea, Five rivers and Waldport and thence back to Newport, Yaquina and Big Elk, crossing into the Luckiamute Valley with their tent and provisions on a hand cart which they took with them. They returned by way of Dallas but had left their cart before reaching here.
