NOT A KISS FOR A BLOW

The following poem was handed us with a request to publish, and although we somewhat doubt its utility as a reform measure we accord it space.

Assault, b'gosh? it must have been,
And each the battle tried to win,
As Skipper bounded from the cart
Resolved to dare and do his part.
With whip upraised, his foe to crush,
His onward movement was a rush;
The yeoman backed, the whip he eyed,
"Go to him," loud the butcher cried.
The whip descended, but it broke,
And ere he made a second stroke,
The yeoman wrenched it from his hand
And lively blows on Tom did land.
Tom soon got wobbly, sure he must,
His foe had laid him in the dust.
The whip was broken bad, 'tis said,
'Twas broken o'er the preacher's head.

Something Diong In The Old Town.

Tudsey was prolific in the way of excitement in this section. Early in the forenoon we noticed by certain unmistakable signs that something unusual had happened and on making our way to a group of men near the meat market, were shown the relics of what had gone before, such as, a broken whip, blood sprinkled upon the side walk and certain prints in the dust as though some person had been down and out. There was much talk about the matter, and while we are not educated in upper-cuts, jabbers, stomachers, solar plexis and a thousand and one phrases of the pugnacious business, we learned that differences had arisen between Mr. Ostrom and Rev. McInturff, that some words had been passed which were more forceful than complimentary, that the latter had assaulted the former with a whip, using the heavy end, and that after the first pass Mr. Ostrom succeeded in possessing himself of the instrument of attack and laid it upon the head of his foe to the extent that his opposer measured his length in the dusty street.

The whip is a wreck and according to report Mr. McInturff got a pretty ugly lick somewhere behind the ear which let out some of the overheated blood.

Well, fighting is bad business; costly in temper, lowers dignity, and leaves enemies in its wake. Don't fight.

Zook the Painter, will hang your paper for you.

WOMAN AND WOE.

Old Age In India Invariably Blends the Two Into One.

"I have seen women under a burning midday sun reaping in the fields," says a writer on India: "I have seen them at roadmaking in the streets of cities; I have seen them loading engines with coal at railway stations; I have seen them in long procession on the white roads of the plains carrying great burdens on their heads like a string of camels. And I have seen also in the eyes of every old woman whom I have encountered, every one of them, such misery, adversity and angry bitterness as seemed to curse the very air of heaven. I have not seen one happy old woman in the whole country.

"Women follow through the village like a dog at the husband's heel. Maternity is no excuse for the task in the field and the duties of the house. They are servants without wages and without liberty to select another master. Before them is perpetual servitude, and if they are so abandoned by the gods as to reach old age their certain destiny is misery, dejection, friendliness and black despair. I never knew all the meaning of the word woe until I looked into the face of an old woman under an Asian sky.

"The women folk of the upper classes in India, speaking generally, are more the prisoners of their husbands than the women of the helot castes. They do not labor except in cooking and serving the meals of their husbands, but they are cut off from the world as completely as a nun; they do not even know, in many cases, the male relations of their husbands. They are little more than caged animals taught to do a few household tricks."—Chicago News.

A Bridge of Ants.

A species of ants which spin silk is common in hot countries. The ants nest in trees, binding the leaves together to make their nests. The silk used for this purpose is not secreted by the adult ants, but by the larvae. In order to attach the silken threads and draw the leaves together the ants must carry the larvae about from leaf to leaf. When two distant leaves are to be drawn together a remarkable method is employed. Five or six ants form a chain bridging the gap between the leaves, each gripping the waist of another in its mandibles. A number of such chains will co-operate in bringing two leaves together.

Beginning of the Drama.

The theater in the only sense that is worth considering was born in Athens. Both tragedy and comedy spring from feasts in honor of Bacchus, and as the jests and frolics were found to be out of place when introduced into graver scenes a separate province—the true drama—was formed and comedy arose. The father of the Greek comedy was Aristophanes, who had lots of fun-lamponing the public men of Athens. The creator of Greek tragedy was Aeschylus, born B. C. 525. In sublimity Aeschylus has never been surpassed. He is to the drama what Phidias and Michelangelo are to art.—New York American.
