

Local and Personal

Earl White has gone to Airlie to help H. R. Davis build a barn for Fred Stump.

F. Y. Mulkey informed us a day or so ago that he had effected the sale of the H. Best place, G. T. Boothby being the purchaser.

Miss Emma Kramer took the early motor, Wednesday, for Dallas, to visit her brother, Cal Kramer, who is very sick at that place.

The Golden Rule Bible Class, of the Christian Sunday school, met at the home of Miss Lucy Foster for its regular monthly business meeting. After the business session an hour was spent in a social way enjoying as well the refreshments served by the hostess. Those present were Mesdames Foster, Parker, Howell, Waller, Cornwell, Mason, Ostrom, Worth, Haley, Daniel, and Misses Maggie Butler and Foster.

Free Traveling Library At Monmouth

Under the auspices of the Book Club, Monmouth has become a traveling library station. The books are to be kept at the home of Mrs. K. M. Jacobson, and during the summer months may be drawn out every evening between seven and eight.

After September first, the Book Club will have charge of a reading room at the same place, which will be open to the public afternoons and evenings.

On Saturday afternoon of this week, the Book Club will meet with Miss Maggie Butler, president of the Club, to discuss ways and means.

Following is a copy of the rules and regulations of the Oregon Library Commission in regard to the Traveling Library.

AGREEMENT

I, the undersigned, hereby apply for the privilege of borrowing books from the Free Traveling Library. I promise to take good care of all the books I draw; to pay promptly all fines and damages charged against me, and to obey the rules of the library. Cut out for future reference the names of the books now here as listed below.

RULES FOR BORROWERS

No Charge for Books.—The books of traveling libraries circulated from the Commission are free to all the people of the town or village where the library is stationed, and of the surrounding country.

Borrowers.—Any responsible person is entitled to draw books by signing the application provided by the librarian. Children must obtain the signature of parent or guardian.

Number of Volumes.—Each borrower may draw one work at a time, being entitled to both parts of a two-volume book.

Time Kept.—A book may be kept two weeks from date of issue, and may be once renewed for the same period.

Fines.—A fine of one cent a day shall be paid for each book kept out over fourteen days without renewal, and any money thus received shall be used by the Secretary of the local library association for library expenses. No book shall be loaned to anyone who has failed to return books or pay fines in accordance with the rules.

Lost and Injured Books.—Borrowers are held responsible for books and are required to pay for lost or injured volumes.

Country Circulation.—Special rules in regard to number of volumes to be loaned and time they may be kept may be made for country districts, upon application to the Commission.

The Store That Saves You Money

BANKS "LOAN" MONEY.

They Don't "Lend" It, Because It Is a Business Transaction.

Why is it banking houses always "loan" their huge sums of money, never by any chance "lend" them? "Lend" is the true verb, while "loan" was exclusively the noun. How came it about that "to loan" has uniformly supplanted "to lend"?

The purists make a great fuss about this. They insist that the stupid and untaught financial world has foisted upon the language a substantive verb when no new verb was needed, when the ancient and established usage was fixed in the signification of "to lend." But prior to the modern development of business enterprise when money was lent it was bestowed upon the borrower either for temporary use with out compensation, as a mark of favor or patronage, or by the professional money lender who, taking advantage of persons in extremities of need, demanded usurious interest. This Anglo-Saxon verb today retains its ancient connotation. When it was coined the productive powers of money were unknown, and the wealth of rich men was locked up for safety and kept out of the channels of commerce.

Nowadays, by devices of credit and rapid intercommunication, it is kept constantly working in productive enterprises. Immense loans are made, no longer to relieve the necessitous and the imprudent, but to stimulate industry and to enable the borrower as well as the lender to reap a profit in his transactions. Money is "loaned" in this sense. It is not lent.—New York Times.

Follows Instructions.

The father of a small family tells us this one:
"My wife instructed our little boy when he was invited out to lunch the other day that when he was asked to have a second helping of cake he should refuse. 'You must say, 'No, I thank you, I've had enough,' said she. 'And don't you forget it.'"
"He didn't. When asked if he'd have some more cake he said, 'No, I thank you, I've had enough, and don't you forget it!'"—Toledo Blade.

Her Kind of Economy.

Persons who had heard the man declare many times that unless he could find a truly economical woman he would never marry laughed cynically at the announcement of his engagement to a woman who had figured in a thirty dollar hat episode.
"Surely," said his friends, "you don't consider a woman who buys thirty dollar hats truly economical?"
"I do," said the man. "Just recall the circumstances. She was found lying in a faint in a millinery store anteroom with $200 in cash and a bill for a thirty dollar hat in her pocket-book. I claim that any woman who will pay only $30 for a hat when she has $200 in cold cash in her pocket-book is economical to the core, and I am going to marry her."—New York Times.
