The Observer made no mistake when it predicted that J. C. Hayter, the retiring editor of this newspaper, would not be contented to remain out of active business for any great length of time. The people of Dallas and surrounding country will be pleased to learn that he is making preparations to open a first-class book and stationery store in this city. The store will be the first of its kind to be opened in Dallas and will be the only exclusive book and stationery establishment in Polk county.—Observer.

A Low Call.

"I understand," began a friend entering into conversation with a clergyman of our acquaintance, "I understand that the people of Jimville are anxious to have you take charge of the new church they have just built." "There has been some talk about it, I believe," answered the reverend gentlemen, "but I don't think that I shall go there." "Don't you think that the Lord is calling you to this new field of endeavor?"

"No, I don't believe he is. If he were, he would certainly put it into their hearts to offer me a much bigger salary. I perceive no divine call and I shall continue in my present field."
