Gamble Entertainment

The entertainment given by the Gambel Concert Company last Saturday evening was a treat to all music lovers as well as those who are not so appreciative of classical music.

The program opened with Liszt's Rhapsody No. 2 played by Mr. Shonert who exhibited great skill in technique and true expression. Liszt wrote many of these fanciful compositions, indicative of highest joy, but the one selected, the second, is the favorite.

From the first tone of the violin, Miss Page had an audience of sympathetic listeners. Her skill is wonderful, and her interpretation, at all times artistic. Her personality was so charming that one was loathe to listen to her last number. For one of her encores she gave an arrangement by Fritz Kreisler, the Hungarian violinist, of a very old composition of Martini's. As far as we know, it has never before been played in America.

The singing of Mr. Ernest Gamble shared equally with the work of the other members of his company. His voice, which is a barytone with a bass quality, was very pleasing. His high tones were especially sweet, and his pronunciation so distinct that his hearers were delighted.

The Gamble Company is one of high class artists, and their program of classical music was rendered so artistically that all could enjoy it.

Came Back To Locate.

Actions often speak with more force than words, and the following from the Dallas Observer is certainly a strong argument in favor of Polk County lands:

After having traveled for many weeks over California with an eye out for a possible location. U. S. Loughary has returned to Dallas more than ever satisfied that there is no better country than that which surrounds Dallas, and to prove that his convictions are not merely transitory, he has just invested the sum of $16,000 in one of the famous prune orchards near here, and will devote his attention to wearing gum boots and making a noise like a horticulturist. The place which he bought was owned by Hugh Hayes and lies only a short distance north of the city. It consists of fifty acres of very fine fruit land, thirty of which are already in bearing orchard. It is well known as an especially valuable tract.

Mr. Loughary is not a stranger to the soil, as he was born on a farm in Polk county, but for a number of years has been a business man in this city, having only lately retired as manager of the Dallas Mercantile Company's store.

Wild strawberries are getting ripe. J. W. Arehart, who lives a few miles southeast of town, brought in several strawberry plants Saturday, on which there are blossoms, green berries and ripe berries. They are on exhibition in the real estate office of the Forest-Hill Investment Company. Mr. Arehart found them growing in his pasture, without any protection whatever from the weather. From the papers we learn that ripe berries are also being found in other parts of the valley. Ripe strawberries in February is something unusual even in Oregon.—Lebanon Express.
