Laborer Loses Eye

A Swede, who has been cutting wood for a farmer near McNary, was brought to the Dallas hospital Wednesday with a large sliver from a steel wedge in his left eye. Dr. McCallon removed the entire eyeball. The man is hard of hearing and can speak only limited English, consequently but little has been learned about him. —Dallas Itemizer.

Returned from California

J. A. Haines returned home last week from a three months visit in Los Angeles, California. He was there during the heavy flood at that place, and reports the damage immense. He says that we never saw water wash land in Oregon, that is, the destruction there was so much worse than anything that has ever taken place in this state that there is no comparison. The land there is very sandy and operates much like quicksand when it overflows.
