DOES THIS MEAN YOU

Newspaper work is like any other kind of business. It cannot run without money and to get money it must have subscribers, hence, this is an invitation to you to subscribe unless you have already done so.

There are a considerable number of persons in and around Monmouth who do not take the HERALD, and although we presume that they would not like to see the town without a newspaper, yet they are willing to let others bear the burden of its maintenance while they receive a share of the collective benefit. Again there are others who use its columns to a limited extent when they wish a little publicity, anxious that they have a hearing, but deaf to the thought that others may wish to reach them. Then there is the fellow who would rather spend 25 cents now and then to advertise something that he wishes to sell than to give a subscription, seemingly forgetful of the fact that if there are many persons of his particular mould that there would be no person, or at least but few to read his ad.

Some may excuse themselves by saying that the paper does not amount to much, but what have you done to help it? Do you suppose that the editor can make the paper what he would like to have it be if he is not properly supported in his labor? One man cannot build what it takes a community of interests to accomplish. If you want a prosperous town you must work together, and not work for some outside place and if you wish to have a good home paper support it and don't try to build up some other at the expense of the one whose interests are linked with yours.

We are and have been sending out statements to those of our patrons who are in arrears and will esteem it a great favor if an early response is forthcoming, but if there are any who do not want to continue taking the HERALD we wish them to say so as we desire to know where we are at.

Young Man With a Call

There is a section of Mississippi in which there are seven negroes to one white. It is a section that for backwardness, for cruel superstition and excesses which get no mention in public prints has nothing like it in the United States.

A young negro whose chief capital was enthusiasm for service went into that country a few years ago. He opened a school under a tree, his pupils numbering 15. In a few months he had a school of 74. He found the funds to build a school house and to buy 100 acres of land around it. That school has now more applications than it can care for. It teaches teachers, who go out as that first young man did, and carry the light of knowledge into the places that have been cave-like in ignorance. Fourteen trades are taught. The manufactures of the pupils find a ready market. Out of that school which met beneath a tree has grown an institution that will be one of the things which will save the south from its worst foe—the ignorance that keeps men upon a plane with the beasts of the field.

That a man should dare so much and do so much in the spirit of service is a beautiful thing. But it is not more encouraging and inspiring than that he found a people eager to accept the gifts he brought them.—Toledo Blade.

The Game of Justice

It is rather remarkable that two Judges of the Superior Bench in one city should find occasion in public addresses to say that justice, as they view its administration in the light of experience, is a game. The mere statement is not received with surprise by the average person, for the truth it expresses has long been a matter of conviction in the public mind. But that two eminent lawyers holding judicial positions in a single city should feel impelled to dwell upon the truth is so significant as to create amazement. The two jurists in question were Judge Peter Dunne and Judge Crothers of San Francisco.

This judicial and, as we might say, professional candor is of slow avail unless the organized conscience of the bar be touched to bring about reform. Just to say that the trial of a case in which the property, the freedom of the citizen or maybe his life is involved is a game does not deter the able attorney who appears in court as representing either side in the case from doing his level best to secure a verdict. In every trial the stage is set for playing the game; and whatever we may say about attorneys being officers of the court and all that, everyone understands that the real issue is the respective abilities of the opposing lawyers. It is to be conceded that there are modifications of this condition, but they do not affect the unpleasant truth of the matter.

It is quite natural that one should ask if there is no prospect of change which will remove this reproach from the administration of justice. And the answer to that question must be that the increasing frequency of comment touching this defect in the conduct of the courts is bound in course of time to bear good fruit. We hear such comment on every hand. It is common at almost every bar session, county, state or National. It is uttered by jurists of high degree and by eminent lawyers everywhere. But strange to say all this comment and discussion have not evolved even the suggestion of a remedy that seems practicable. There is evidence of an aroused conscience, however, and optimism hopes for better things.—Portland Telegram.

Bargains In Land

We have concluded to engage in the Real Estate Business, but different from others. We propose to bring buyer and seller together. If they trade our remuneration to be 2 1-2 per cent.

I am in touch with many prospective buyers and traders. Consult me. I have lands that can be bought or traded almost anywhere you desire it.

Washington Lands

80 acres, 9 miles north of Goldendale, 12 acres cleared, mostly in apples, 60 acres good land, balance rocky; good house and barn.

320 acres, 3 miles from Centerville, prairie land, 225 acres under plow, part of land is second swale, part of uncultivated land can be plowed, the balance is pasture land; hog-tight fences, mostly new; well, springs, windmill and tank, house, new barn and other buildings. Owner does not need cash and has farm machinery to sell on reasonable terms.

120 acres, 10 miles north of Goldendale, 8 acres under plow, 16 acres slashed and burned. 200 to 225 bearing fruit trees. 300 more two year old apples. All good land and lies nearly level. Irrigating ditch and good creek. There are 1000 cords of wood standing,

Large 7 room house, barn. Price $6,000, mortgage of $600. Will trade for improved ranch of equal value.

The timber soil is volcanic ash and red shot, and it is suitable for all kinds of fruit, berries, alfalfa, grain, potatoes, etc.

Land is easily cleared, as the timber is scattering, in some cases the timber will pay for the cost of clearing, and an average cost is $25 per acre.
