Restoring Palestine

Palestine, an independent Jewish state, a dream of centuries, may be one result of the European war. Both England and Russia will favor such a project, says the London Globe.

While the war is yet too young to indicate what nations will be chiefly instrumental in shaping the future, the Globe's statement is interesting. It may mean that a people who lost their country 2000 years ago are to have it returned to them as fulfillment of a hope based in deep religious instinct.

Great Britain will favor the project, says the Globe, because a small neutral state in the Holy Land would be the best possible protection to Suez and Egypt. Russia will sanction such a plan because it will make the way easier for her to settle Jewish problems within her own borders. The London newspaper says:

"The events of the moment show how immediately Egyptian integrity is imperiled by the fact that a right of way through Palestine is open to a hostile power. Palestine must become either British or neutral. There is an obvious political objection to a British occupation. Neutrality is the most desirable solution."

There are two great influences at work for the reestablishment of a Jewish state—British desire for a neutral Palestine and the territorial instinct of Jews themselves. Russia has pledged herself to the reestablishment of an autonomous Poland under the Czar, but the Globe says there is an obvious obstacle to the development of a Polish state, and there is the presence of a large Jewish element.

An independent Palestine would help the Polish Jews. It would furnish them a refuge and an opportunity to demonstrate their real worth when not burdened with the handicap of religious prejudice. It is a problem for Europe to solve, but right thinking Jews and Christians everywhere would join in furthering any project which gave promise of delivering a great body of people from oppression.

When the big European war ends there may be many rearrangements of territory and governments in the interest of civilization. A restored Palestine would be one of them.—Portland Journal.

Marriage And Habit

Our life is a tissue of habits to a far greater extent than we realize. The great decisions are made somewhat on their merits; but the thousand little acts and movements and thoughts of every day are made by an instinct rooted deep in the growth of past generations.

Every people, every community, every family has its habits, with which the individual grows up, hardly realizing that they differ from the habits of others. It is astonishing how early this garment of habit becomes fitted to us, how hard it is to change it. And although it hampers the old more than the young, yet the young, from lack of experience, are less tolerant of the different habits of others than are their elders.

So marriage becomes a clash of habits. When two people become engaged, both try, quite innocently, to appear not as they are, but as the other wishes them to be. With the unbroken propinquity of marriage, the strain of attitude becomes too great. Sooner or later both sink back, with a sigh of relief, into the old clothes of habit, which seem so comfortable.

This is the crisis that breaks so many marriages, the problem of adjusting the daily habits of thought, of conduct, of money, of eating and drinking. For the trouble is felt far more in little things than in great.

The remedy for the conflict of habit in marriage is to be prepared for it. Parents should teach their children early that there are more good ways than one of living in the world. A man may be thoroughly honorable and charming to live with, and yet like his food quite differently cooked from the way you prefer it. Even though we yield to our habits, we should try to keep them flexible, adaptable, capable of being moulded into conformity with others quite different. It is only by such mutual discipline that a happy marriage is possible, and the sooner it begins, the better.—Youth's Companion.

Attorney General Gives Opinion Regarding Pool Room

Salem, Ore., Dec. 4, 1914
Mr. P. H. Johnson, Mayor of the City of Monmouth, Monmouth, Oregon.

Dear Sir:
I am advised by Mr. C. D. Tyler and others of your city that you desire the opinion of this office, constraining section 21, page 478, Laws of 1899, the same being a special act of the Legislature providing a charter for the city of Monmouth. It is desired to know particularly whether this provision in your charter prohibits the conducting of a pool room for the use of the members only in a private club.

It is my opinion said section does not prohibit the use of pool tables in private club rooms where the same are not conducted for gambling or other unlawful purposes, but solely for the pleasure of the members of the club who pay the club for the use of said tables. Said section 21 reads as follows:

"No saloon nor barroom, where malt or spirituous liquors are kept for sale or in any manner disposed of, nor gaming, nor gambling houses, or bawdy houses, nor public bowling saloons shall ever be permitted, or allowed within the corporate limits of the city of Monmouth, Oregon."

The expression "gaming nor gambling houses" refers to houses in which games are conducted for the purpose of allowing members to wager bets thereon and has no application in my opinion to the operation of pool tables for the sole use of members of a private club, when same are not used for the purpose of enabling the players to place bets.

Yours truly,
A. M. CRAWFORD,
Attorney General.
