Teachers' and Industrial Workers' Institute at Dallas

The local Teachers' and Industrial Worker's Institute, which was held at Dallas, Saturday, January 30th, was the first meeting of the kind ever held in the Northwest in which the teachers and the different children over the county, who are officers and members of the different Industrial clubs, came together and heard the club projects outlined and discussed by members of the Oregon Agricultural College, who are promoting this work.

The morning session was opened by some excellent musical numbers given by the Dallas High School Orchestra. This was followed by a general discussion on club work as it is working over the United States, State and County, by F. L. Griffin, State Leader of Industrial Work, Oregon Agricultural College. The institute was then divided into departments in which Miss Cowgill took up the projects of sewing, baking and canning. Mr. W. A. Barr took up the dairy herd, record work and stock judging work and Mr. Griffin took up the potato, corn, fruit, gardening, pig and poultry projects. The discussion on these same projects was continued throughout the afternoon and Mr. Barr gave instructions in stock judging to a class of about forty boys from over the county who are planning on entering the contest to be given at Corvallis next Friday, Feb. 5, open to all boys and girls of the county.

The meeting was one of the best ever attended in the county and again demonstrates the fact that the teachers of Polk county are loyal to their profession and are always willing to come and learn. The officers and members of the different Industrial Clubs over the county were also there in great numbers. Many of them driving twenty-five miles to reach the meeting. All of the instructors expressed themselves as more than pleased with the interest shown in the work by the teachers and club members.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the Principal's Club of the county met and also took up the discussion of the club work from the standpoint of a principal and city superintendent. There were 85 teachers and 51 club workers present.

CHEAP LIVING IN NORWAY.

Pride and Wages Are Low and So-body Works Too Hard.

Norway is a land where peace and quiet and cheap living rule. Wages and salaries are low as compared with ours. The royal household is allotted $175,000 a year, the prime minister receives $5,000, the secretary for foreign affairs, who is the entertainer among the officials, receives $7,500, and the other members of the cabinet, $3,000. The bishop of Christiania, the head of the Lutheran or state church, though he is, he says, only primus inter pares, receives $4,000 a year. The other bishops—there are six in all—$2,000 to $2,500, and the clergy, of whom there are 800, from $1,000 to $1,500.

An income of $5,000 a year means every comfort. An income of $10,000 includes more than all the luxuries that the small towns afford, and $20,000 means wealth, and places a man well outside the realm of expenditure of his neighbors in Christiania or anywhere else in Norway.

Cooks are paid $6 a month—a good one $8—and a certain diplomat who pays his cook $13 gave us a dinner that his chef in Paris would find it difficult to improve upon. Housemaids and the like receive $5 a month. In one of the smaller towns I was told on the good authority of a leading citizen that families with $500 to $600 a year keep at least one servant, who receives, say, $50 a year, and where the income is from $1,000 to $1,500 there are two. Nobody, in short, works too hard.

On the farms the servants are more or less members of the family, and women of small officials and others sometimes go into service, and very often take employment as clerks, stenographers, secretaries and the like.

The wife of a foreign diplomat was asked for an evening off by her maid the night of a court ball. The mistress demurred, as she needed her maid on that particular evening, but discovered that the maid also was going to the court ball, being invited as the daughter of a small official in the town.—Price Collier in Scribner's.
