MACY-DUNSMORE

An unusually attractive wedding was that of Miss Katie R. Dunsmore and Mr. O. A. Macy which was solemnized by the Reverend H. Charles Dunsmore, father of the bride, at noon Sunday, May 23. Before a bower of locust blossoms the simple ring ceremony was read. Only the brother of the bride and the near relatives of the bride groom with a few immediate friends were present. After the ceremony an elaborate luncheon was served by Miss Butler, Miss Hoham and Miss Taylor at whose home the wedding took place. The bride was lovely in a simple white gown and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and maiden hair fern. The decorations of the rooms were artistically arranged roses which converted the house into a real bower. Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Macy left for a short trip to Portland. They will be at home in Independence where Mr. Macy is in business. Mrs. Macy who has been the Registrar of the Oregon Normal School for four years is a most charming girl and carries with her to her new home hosts of good wishes from her Monmouth friends. Dr. Dunsmore, who came from California for the occasion, returned Monday.

STATE NORMAL SCHOOL NOTES

Reception Program to The G. A. R. Monday

WILL COMMENCE AT 2.00 P. M.

To Be Held in the Normal Chapel And the Public is Cordially Invited to be Present

The Oregon Normal School, following its well-established custom, has prepared a reception program to the G. A. R. to which the public is cordially invited. This program will begin at 2:00 p. m., May 31, and will be held in the Normal chapel. The program is as follows:

Song, Normal.
Reading and Prayer, Chaplain, G. A. R.
Song, Normal.
Address of Welcome, President Ackerman.
Our Country and Our Flag, Miss Marie Andrews.
Song, Training School.
Annual Address, C. N. McArthur, M. C.
Music, G. A. R.
Closing Song, Normal.

Last Friday was an unusually festive day at the Oregon Normal School. Miss West, the librarian, occupied the chapel period with a very fine talk on library work and organization, past and present which was especially illuminating to those who perhaps were not entirely familiar with the whole range of library work. The students evidenced their appreciation with most hearty applause. The Sophomore-Freshman class had decorated the chapel most artistically with roses and ferns so that everyone was keenly expectant as to the events of the day. Every one was at the chapel at two o'clock when the Training School Orchestra, directed by Miss Hoham, began the overture. The play itself "At The End of the Rainbow" was full of action and college life. The parts were all so well taken that to mention the stars would mean simply a recital of the whole cast. The ensemble of foot ball enthusiasts, the singing and shouting, the excellent interpretation of individual parts all combined to make the staging of the play a most happy one. The music by the orchestra and the candy girls with their musical cries and sweet wares served to make the intervals between acts almost too short. The class advisors, Miss West, Mr. Evenden, Miss Kennon and Mr. Gentle were responsible for the coaching of the play while the classes worked enthusiastically to make it what it was—an unqualified success.

Wednesday the student body enjoyed Miss Hellen Thomas' paper "How to be a Successful Rural Teacher." Miss Thomas presented her subject well and showed what qualities students needed to cultivate for rural work.

SOCIAL CONDITIONS; PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE

Our form of government was republican. It was founded with equal rights as its basis. Its Declaration of Independence is a plea for Justice and a plea to stamp out forever all that makes for Injustice. Its Constitution was bathed in the blood of Liberty; its preamble was a call of Democracy.

With such a bright outlook for the future let us follow in brief its career. After the Revolutionary War was over the people turned their attention again towards getting a living. Pioneer bands of them left their civilized homes to live in the wilderness.

There they lived surrounded by the wild animals of the forest and by the treacherous Indians. They raised only enough produce that they could consume and killed the wild animals for their supply of meat. Time rolls on. The War of 1812 has shown England another time that the American pioneer is her equal. After the war the people turn their attention again to domestic matters. This time it is to advance pioneer movements by increasing the means of communication.

Roads were built; canals constructed and steamboats, railroads and telegraphs added. Again time rolls on. The Civil War only through bloody fratricide has shown ourselves that the North and the South must stand together. After the war we turn again to peaceful pursuits. The lands of the South were as a desert. The North was a land of idleness. But soon the effect of the war decreases.

Again the lands of the South grow larger crops of cotton than ever before. The North is a land of activity. New factories have been established. New industries spring up and new crops are grown in both North and South. In the North is heard the whir of machinery, in the South is seen the growing of cotton and sugar cane. The whole country has steadily increased in population, wealth and general prosperity. Once more time rolls on and another war is added to our history—the War with Spain.

We have won and in the end have annexed the Hawaiian Islands, Porto Rico, Guam and exert temporary control over the Philippines. Cuba is a republic. We have also added to our island possessions Tutuila and other islands of the Samoan group in the South Pacific and have purchased Alaska from Russia.

Let us go back to the War of 1812 and see what the social conditions of the American people have been up to the present day.

While engaged in pioneer life the people had little time to concern themselves with social conditions. They made their own social conditions.

As is the general rule in all nations there are some who have a discerning eye towards the future. There were some of that type in the pioneer period of our history. They were the men who planned Railroads and Canals, Steamboats and Telegraphs for
