

Forest Notes

Nearly two million willow cuttings have been distributed by the Forest Service among State Experiment Stations, forest schools, and individual growers. Now that the European supply of willow for furniture and baskets has been cut off, this American material is in greater demand.

The total amount of standing timber in the United States is nearly 2,900 billion board feet. Of this amount, about 76 per cent is privately owned, approximately 21 per cent is in the National Forests, and about 3 per cent in some other form of public ownership—Federal, State or municipal. The aim of forestry is to bring the forest up to its highest state of productiveness and keep it there.

By greater economy in the use of wood, the per capita consumption could easily be reduced from the present figure of 260 cubic feet to 150 or even 100 cubic feet without hardship. At present we use only 50 per cent of the total volume of the tree and leave 50 per cent to be wasted.

In this country, twenty-five States have active forest departments and employ professional foresters; twenty States have efficient fire-protective systems; fourteen have established State forests, and thirteen maintain forest-tree nurseries.
