OUR PUBLIC FORUM

JULIUS KRUTTSCHNITT.
On the Business Pond.

Mr. Julius Kruttschnitt, when asked to give his views on the business outlook of the nation from the railroad standpoint, said in part:

"Business as today organized may be likened to a great pond, in which numberless waves are started one after another by the purchases and sales of the many individuals and companies, these waves spreading in all directions, crossing and recrossing, until their force is spent.

Everybody appreciates what would happen if a great bowlder like the European war should suddenly be dropped into the business pond, but not everybody appreciates the effect of the slackening of activity at some important center of wave force. The effect of a reduction in the purchasing power of farmers, following a season of bad crops, is generally understood. But how about the purchasing power of the great transportation industry? With the steady march of operating expenses upon revenues, without corresponding increases in railway charges, the railways have been driven to curtail all expenditures, and even stop entirely many customary purchases for extending and improving their facilities. The business pond is too big, and its wave activity too complex, to say
