INDUSTRIAL CLUB WORK

Prof. Gilmore Makes Statement as to Club Aims

This year those in charge of the industrial work are requesting that no children be enrolled for this work without the knowledge of their parents. Accordingly I am writing this letter in the hope that it may advise the public, and particularly those parents whom I may not be able to see personally, as to the nature of this work. In the first place it is based upon the theory that it is good for children to have something all their own in which others beside the parents take an interest. It is believed that interest of the proper sort coming from outside the family is stimulating to the child. Of course anything which can do this, if followed up, is bound to make a better citizen of the child. Examples of this are numerous. To accomplish this and other ends, the national government organized in the several states corn and canning clubs among the school children. In Oregon we have gone a step farther and added potato gardening, poultry, pork production, baking, sewing, dairy-herd record keeping etc. During the past three years a number of the children of our community have followed this kind of work with varying success. Beth Ostrom won first prize in the state of Oregon in canning, and John Stump for pigs. Others won prizes in the county. But I am not holding up the prizes. True the prize money brought into Monmouth during the past two years has been out of proportion to the costs, but we feel that if not a single prize had been won, what the individual children gained in training was well worth the effort. Accordingly I think it would be an excellent thing if all the children between ten and eighteen could carry on some form of project work. This is the plan of the work. First after upon consulting with the parents, the children sign an enrollment blank. This is also signed by one of the parents. These blanks will be mailed into Corvallis. A few days later the first instructions will be sent from the college. I shall personally give assistance to the children who find difficulty with the agricultural directions. Miss Butler has always assisted the girls in their projects. This does not mean that I pose as being able to answer all the questions which are asked. It simply means I will lend a willing ear and try to be of assistance. After the children are well started in their work, I make it a point to visit them as many as three or four times a season. You may ask some home I have visited, what is done on such visits. I may say I visit to encourage the child instead of criticising. From time to time instructions are sent from the college. Many parents find these as useful as do the children. When it is possible I have some member of the O. A. C. Extension Service "go the rounds" with me. If you think this kind of work worth while urge your child to enter, if not, keep him out. I do not want to waste my time upon people who do not desire it.
