Speaks for Himself

I took an examination and sent in an application for appointment in the Medical Officers Reserve Corps of the U. S. Army as First Lieutenant and I expect to get a commission as First Lieutenant but not before the blanks and credentials have time to go to Washington D. C. and be examined and the commission made out and sent here by mail.

If I get a commission and am called I have to go where I am told to go and I do not expect to be sent to war without being trained for war.

Any report different from the above is incorrect and did not come from me.

Smith said there was a sentence that sounds very reasonable, but still is very catchy. It is this: "What I am doing." Say it just as fast as you can." When Mr. Jones said this with much rapidity, Mr. Smith said coldly: "Making a fool of yourself."

Peanuts as Food.

The peanut is a mine of riches, containing more protein, or lean meat value, than any other nut known and an immense store of fat, so that as a food it is a rich treasure, but it should be recognized and used as a solid food and not as a between meal tidbit, for it is anything but a delicate or light food. This, however, may be said of all nuts, and one should avoid overloading the system with them, for by this is indigestion formed and undeserved reproach to nuts as foods.

Gargle For a Sore Throat.

The discomfort and pain of a sore throat are greatly relieved by using a gargle. One of the most efficacious remedies for the purpose is boric acid. It disinfects the throat as well as mitigates the distress. The gargle should be a solution prepared from the powdered boric acid—using four heaping teaspoonfuls to a pint of boiling water. When the mixture has cooled it is ready for use. Use the gargle every three or four hours.
