

"Dec. 27, 1911. — Was talking with two boys of the Royal Scots today. They have just come down from the Hollebekke trenches, and they are in terrible condition. Their casualties during the last engagement were light, as they lost only four killed and nineteen wounded, but forty-two died from exposure.

"One poor devil tells me that he has three brothers and fifteen cousins in his battalion. Two of his brothers died during the past two weeks. One stopped a bullet, but the other one drowned right by his side in the trenches, and he was unable to aid him.

"A lot came in on their hands and knees, and many came dragging themselves on their stomachs through the mud. It was terrible."

One of the saddest things I have ever seen is the last roll call of a regiment which has been cut to pieces. I saw one regiment go into action for the first time.

I watched them go up singing and shouting and in high spirits generally. They were 1,100 strong going into action, but two days later they came out, and there were only twenty-three of them to answer the last roll call. It was a heartbreaking sight and impossible to forget.

Many prominent society women, led by Mrs. Adrian Iselin, have given up social activities in order to teach sailors how to cook. Mrs. Iselin, writing in the November issue of Harper's Bazar, tells how, through her New York cooking school, these women are training able seamen to prepare food properly and are rapidly lessening the shortage of capable chefs in the navy. Rear-Admiral Usher, U. S. N., has cooperated with Mrs. Iselin and has indorsed her work.

The men have learned very quickly. In fact, Admiral Usher says: "Without this aid, it would have been a difficult matter for us to supply a sufficient number of competent cooks to the small vessels in the district, and to the large German liners which were recently taken over by the government."

Ira Powell sent a sack of his celebrated filberts, Tuesday, for exhibition at the Land Products show in Portland.

Prune picking at the Monmouth Orchards lasted an unusually long time this year and it took thirty days to harvest the crop. Seven or eight hundred bushels were too immature to dry but the marketable product was sixty seven thousand pounds of beautiful prunes. This was from practically fifty acres of the seventy two as twenty two of trees were too small to bear well.

On Hallowe'en at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Johnson, the girls living in their apartment house and home were entertained by the light of a large bonfire.

The evening was spent in games after which apples, popcorn balls with candy owls and faces on them, were served. All enjoyed a pleasant evening.

Pomona Grange met at McCoy last Saturday with a large attendance. After a fine dinner served by the ladies of the McCoy grange the afternoon program was rendered. Miss Mills of McMinnville was the speaker and her talk dealt with conservation of cereals sugar and fats. A vote of thanks was tendered Miss Mills at the termination of her remarks. Senator Hawley reported that he had interviewed the state lime board and they had given him reason to believe that lime for fertilizer purposes would soon be available in the Willamette valley for $3.50 per ton. The grange went on record, also as favoring the appointment of a county agriculturalist and so petitioned the county court. The next meeting of the Pomona Grange will be held in Monmouth on the fourth Saturday in January.
