Mrs. C. Lorence.

Last Friday the boys of the Normal contributed their mite to enliven the gaiety of the community. They put on an original skit which might have been called, "Bachelor's Hall" most appropriately and if there was a serious line therein, it was something that was overlooked. It was a riot from start to finish and in the course thereof each young man managed to work in some of his particular specialty. Of course Morgan was strong on singing, Gilbreath turned the flapjacks by tossing them around the stove pipe, Oliver read a number of squibs which no one but he could find in the Monmouth Herald, Weber was going to have his shoes shined even if it did interfere with the quartet practice, etc. There were a number of allusions to the faculty which were more or less funny depending on the point of view.
