study carefully but as yet he has received "nary a letter".

Corporal "Boots" Kersey the newly appointed mail orderly for the company, would like to give the epistles direct to the officer, but this would be in violation of the rules of war. The former Dallas candy shop man is also acting mess sergeant, and he is seeing just how well he can feed the boys while the real sergeant is away. "Boots" doesn't care for expenses; this will trouble the superior non-com when he comes home. And now the lads are riding high three times per with "Ex Boots" Kersey to blame if they get the gout. And speaking of the kitchen reminds us how Sergeant Edward K. Gohrke, said to have been the handsomest military policeman who ever trod the streets of Nevers tried to dodge work the other day. It is the custom for the "top" to detail a number of men each morning to clean up the kitchen, company office and billets in the farm yard on the edge of town. This detail is in charge of a sergeant, and the work is done before these men can eat breakfast. Gohrke thought it was his turn so, instead of falling into line, he hid behind the stove and stovepipe.

The "top" did not let on he saw him. But when the time came he just yelled loud enough for the entire company to hear: "Sergeant Gohrke, come out from behind the stovepipe and police this place!" And out came the former meat market man, keeping step to the tune of merry laughter. He did a quick neat job of cleaning up, for his billet is a mile from the town hall and on the opposite side of the drill field, which is three and three-eighths miles from the village square. Men must be out on the drill field on time even if they have to miss petit dejeuner.
