Monmouth Meditations

A wet spring is making late gardens in this vicinity.

Appreciate the wet while you get it. We will be dry enough later on.

Germany will soon be handed the bill for the fiddler's services.

Borah appears to be the original doubter.

Save one or two of your Liberty Bonds for the Monmouth Memorial hall.

The outlook is that Polk county will soon have plenty of paved roads.

The war time prohibition act appears to have been drafted with the idea of enforcement by pacifists.

Judging from his partiality to articles of feminine apparel, Tuesday night's burglar must be headed toward Turkey.

The prospect is that this section of Oregon will do its share in the production of that bumper wheat crop this year.

They are still looking for precedents by which the Kaiser can be tried for his offences. Let us establish a precedent, one that later jurists can refer to if need be.

Since England can not solve the Irish problem, it might be respectfully referred to a committee consisting of Edison, Burbank and Henry Ford.

There is more than a surplus of public enterprises which demand attention in Monmouth just at present, but as soon as there is breathing space we expect to see the community hall taken up and carried to successful termination.

Independence and Monmouth enjoy most pulling separately and they never will realize what a little team work would do for them if they never try it.

From the manner in which the escaping steam pops every time Senator Chamberlain releases the safety valve lever there must be a considerable accumulation of stored up wrath within him. The senator has had a first hand chance at information in Washington and is acquainted with facts not generally known but with which future historians will deal.

Some people imagine that the only people who will use the Pacific highway are tourists. The truth is that ninety per cent of the travel over it will be by people who live close to it. To get the view point of the highway commission you must consider you live in Benton county and plan to cross Polk a dozen or fifteen times a year. You wouldn't want to jig saw from one corner of the county to the other every time you went through it. The direct route will get the bulk of the traffic.

John Barleycorn is putting up a howl but he will be outlawed in the near future, and despite bold talk he won't come back. The Federal constitution is a hard obstacle to surmount. Alcohol will be distilled for power and fuel instead of devilment and destruction and much of the business which John Barleycorn monopolized will go to grape juice, sweet cider and Loganberry juice. Which makes the advertisement of the Pheasant Co. in another column all the more significant. Everything indicates that the loganberry industry in the Willamette valley is facing a bright future.

It was quite a mouthful that Dr. Winship said when he talked of the passing of money as a basis of values to credit as a basis of values. Under the money system the war destroyed nothing for gold and silver were not burned, nor fired from the mouth of cannons, nor sunk in the Atlantic. There is just as much gold and silver in the world as before the war began. As far as they are concerned the world is just as rich now as it was four years ago. But credits have been destroyed and this fact is most important when it comes to reweaving the fabric of civilization.

Although there was a unanimous sentiment in Dallas Saturday afternoon for the hard roads project it must not be hoped this will continue to the polls. The knocker is always with us and long ago he began digging for the peculiar ammunition of his kind. It will cost more. You can't get the money. There is not enough help. The paving won't last. These are a few of the things he repeats when he gets a chance.

They tell us that paper was never in such demand as it is at present. Europe has become a large importer and whole shiploads are sent to Asia to supply the demand of the orientals. Paper making in this section has greatly increased in quantity of production during the last few years and will expand very much more in the next few years.

The true citizen sees the project through. He stays to wind up the hose after the fire is out. He helps to clean up and wash the dishes after the banquet. He helps to restore costumes and return properties when the amateur show is ended. This is the citizen who can be relied on to see the Victory loan through; to help the government in the clean up process, now that the war is ended. Buying bonds at this time is a true test of your public spirit.

One day in December 1897, the mediator sat in the office of Levy Mayer in Chicago and heard that gentleman give an opinion of a case before him. Of Hebraic cast, black curly hair, aquiline nose he talked as if serious things and matters of large importance were his common fare, as they were. Apparently he had no mind for the lesser things of life. Now he is the actual legal mind which is seeking to break the prohibition amendment. The other day he gave vent to sentiments on the matter in which such phrases as "personal liberty" "freedom of conduct" "confiscation of property", etc., were frequent. Why those things have been hashed and chewed over long ago and settled. Can it be that Mr. Mayer in his research into corporation law, into the fine points of high finance, into matters of jurisdiction and jurisprudence, has been unaware of this great moral fight which the plebeian and common herd of mortals have fought and settled right under his nose? Mr. Mayer's education has been decidedly neglected and he is apt to learn a few things before he gets through with this particular case.
