Price of Fordson Cut

Tractor that is far in lead of all other competitors drops in price

McLean & Barnard have received word of a decided and immediate cut in the price of the Fordson to $750, f. o. b. Detroit.

The present Fordson is a growth from many tractors. First there came years of building and proving during which time Henry Ford made and tested 32 different types and sizes of tractors. Among those 32 discarded types were tractors of nearly every kind. Henry Ford never offers the public an untried article. He stood the cost of testing the big cylinder types of tractors motors. He built tested and then discarded tractors of the frame type, the chain drive, the open gear drive as well as the four wheel drive. Thirty two different types of tractors Henry Ford built, tested and then discarded as failures before he decided upon his present tractor. But from every discarded tractor he learned some principal to keep and some weakness to avoid.

That the judgement of this wizard of mechanics was full and right is evidenced by the thousands of Fordson tractors being bought the country over.

It was over six years ago when Henry Ford put his stamp of approval on the present Fordson. It has stood the test and now is being built at the rate of 150,000 a year.

This full 2 plow machine delivers 22 horsepower on the belt. It is constructed of the finest materials with all of its moving parts in oil proof cases.

A line to us brings full details.
