Price of Fordson Cut

Tractor that is far in lead of all other competitors drops in price

McLean & Barnard have received word of a decided and immediate cut in the price of the Fordson to $750, f. o. b. Detroit.

The present Fordson is a growth from many tractors. First there came years of building and proving during which time Henry Ford made and tested 32 different types and sizes of tractors. Among those 32 discarded types were tractors of nearly every kind. Henry Ford never offers the public an untried article. He stood the cost of testing the big cylinder types of tractors motors. He built tested and then discarded tractors of the frame type, the chain drive, the open gear drive as well as the four wheel drive. Thirty two different types of tractors Henry Ford built, tested and then discarded as failures before he decided upon his present tractor. But from every discarded tractor he learned some principal to keep and some weakness to avoid.

That the judgement of this wizzard of mechanics was full and right is evidenced by the thousands of Fordson tractors being bought the country over.

It was over six years ago when Henry Ford put his stamp of approval on the present Fordson. It has stood the test and now is being built at the rate of 150,000 a year.

This full 2 plow machine delivers 22 horsepower on the belt. It is constructed of the finest materials with all of its moving parts in oil proof cases.

Shoe Styles Every Stitch Yank

One lesson that the war taught America was that we were not depending upon Europe one half as much for style ideas as was popularly supposed. The new summer and fall shoes have proved this out, because, while Paris style leaders were trying to shove the Cuban heel down our throats, American women are going their merry way, with the graceful high heel in pump and shoe that is 100 per cent Yank. Milady is here shown hanging out a line of reasonable hose—but it's not a wash—instead the newest in woven transparent patterns and a few embroidered styles.
