Where Has The Bucksaw Gone?

The flail, the cradle, the kitchen coffee mill. These aids of the past silently have risen and left us. Their coming was heralded, their departure soundless.

The oxen have left. The carriage horses are gone. The freight teams are out of sight. One by one, past us out of the fields, the plow horses have started to file, soon to be gone, not to return.

We are a race of mechanics, constantly and doggedly we are supplanting muscle power with mechanical power. More than this, when once a created mechanical device is able to compete with the muscle power it aims to supplant, all the laws of economics rush to the aid of the new creation. Quantity production starts, thousands of new minds turn to help improve and refine. Auxiliary industries pave the way. Quickly the race is ended and another aid of the past is gone.

Today the cost of muscle power for farming compared with the cost of gas power is sending Fordson Tractors into this country's fields by the tens of thousands.

There are Fordsons with nearly five seasons behind them and still going strong.

Fordson farming is here—Here to stay.—Adv.

Improved Soldering Process.

A form of the Schoop metal-spraying process is claimed to be effective in soldering. The soldering pistol does not require the compressed air jet, as the fuel-gas used is under pressure and gives the flame sufficient driving force to spread the solder over the surfaces to be soldered. A small driving mechanism feeds the wire solder continuously into the flame. The method is convenient, rapid and inexpensive and is free from the tedious and disagreeable features of soldering by hand.

Has Fordson Farming Made Good?

In big numbers the Fordson tractor has seen service in France, England and Canada. It is being driven by the thousands into the fields of the United States.

For seven years the present Fordson has been built.

Fordson Farming is not an experiment.

It is a Positive Success

This Fall's demand for Fordsons is sweeping past the supply. The Fordson's doubled output is unequal to the demand. We warn you and ask that you place your order at once. Our allotment is limited.
