Kompany K Kolyum

Inspection night proved to be a grand success from the number of members present and the total exceeded any previous drill period except perhaps the day the company was mustered into Federal Service. It is to be regretted that our armory is inadequate for full company instruction and Lieutenant Instructor Newton was compelled to demonstrate the different movements of squad drill to the company by means of a squad composed of the non-commissioned officers.

The boys used the new rifles for the first time and the guns didn't seem to work well for some of them. The equipment was spread out for inspection of the company and each man was shown what would be allotted him in case of a call to arms. No place for a weaking. Captain Stidd asked if any one objected to drilling but from all reports the men are back of Company K to the man.

Later in the evening a feed was devoured, prepared by our cooks, Cox and Lochridge and believe us, these two can cook. If an organization in the city is contemplating any thing of this kind in the future, they will make no mistake in engaging them. It is the intention of the company to prepare a small feed each drill night and no doubt the efficiency of this organization should improve rapidly.

The pay roll blanks for the semi-annual period ending December 31, 1919, and each man will be compelled to receipt for his pay before the claim is honored by the government.

The adjutant informs us that our sister city of Dallas will soon get a company of N. G. O. for artillery; also that the platoon in McMinnville will soon be enlarged to a company.

Another shipment of clothing has arrived, including blouses, pants, hats and hat cords and this about completes the supply of equipment. Arrangements have not been made as yet as to distribution. The custom in vogue in other companies as to wearing the uniforms home is that they are to be worn only to and from drill but to be kept by the men on their honor, in some cases fines are levied in case a member is caught with his uniform on.
