We Need the Money

Why Some Knowledge is Handy.

A knowledge of practical chemistry and physics can be used to good advantage in the home when methods for removing stains and cleaning household articles are to be utilized. One must exercise care in the choice of agents to see that they do not injure the article to be polished or cleaned. Borax, added to water, greatly aids in the removal of dirt, and most readers are familiar with the use of ammonia for this purpose, says a writer in Electrical Experimenter. All polished wood surfaces, except those finished with wax, may be cleaned with a weak solution of ammonia, but they never should be treated with a strong alkaline solution. Kerosene or turpentine may be used as solvents for grease, and painted surfaces, especially white, may be cleaned with whiting. Leather may be kept bright or clean with kerosene and occasionally a little oil; marble may be scoured with sand- soap and alcohol is used extensively to clean delicate glass. As a substitute for dangerous gasoline one may use carbon tetrachlorid, which is non-flammable.

Provide a nest for each 4 or 5 hens.
Feed table and kitchen waste to the hens.
Give a light feed of grain in the morning.
Begin marketing the cockerels as soon as they weigh one pound or attain a marketable weight.
When selling eggs to the country merchant or cash buyer insist that the transaction be on a quality basis.
Eggs from "stolen" nests should not be marketed; they are of unknown age and quality and should be used at home.
