TRY SQUARE TREE

Successful Efforts at Nature Faking in England.

One of Most Extraordinary Experiments in Plant World is That of Growing Potatoes and Tomatoes on Same Plant.

Recently the Cambridge Forestry association suggested that trees can be made to grow square instead of round, and thus may be made to produce more and better timber, remarks London Answers.

The assertion has given rise to some amount of good natured chaff but some miracles more wonderful than the growing of square trees have been performed in the plant world. The scientist waved his wand, as it were, and produced the seedless orange, a large, juicy, delicious fruit, free from what we call pipe.

Again he took a piece of wood, the stock of an ordinary wild briar, and on it he produced a score of varieties of roses, making a multi-colored bush with roses large and small, red, white, crimson, salmon, yellow, pink, cream and every shade between, all on the same bush.

Something akin to growing square trees has been practiced for centuries and what may be termed plant monstrosities are by no means uncommon.

Most of us would recognize the white bryony (Bryonia dioica), so common in our hedgerows. The roots of this plant, which often grow to a colossal size, have been grown to shape, as it were.

Perhaps one of the most extraordinary experiments in the plant world has just been successfully tried with the potato plant. The potato belongs to the same family as the tomato, and included in the same family are the tobacco plant, the mandrake and the deadly nightshade, among others.

Advantage was taken of the relationship of the potato to the tomato actually to grow a crop of potatoes on the roots of a potato plant and a crop of tomatoes in the flumes (stalks and foliage) of the same plants. To see a crop of tomatoes among the foliage of a potato plant, while potatoes are growing on the roots of the same plant, is a sight more wonderful surely than square trees.

Within a few miles of London is a wall surrounding a churchyard. The wall is covered with ivy, and in one of the bricks is a square hole.

Many years ago a sprig of the ivy climbed through the hole and gradually the hole became filled up with the wood of the ivy, and it became absolutely square, assuming its normal shape on the outer side of the square hole. If a sapling was surrounded by a plaster of paris or metal mold which was square there is no reason why the wood of the tree so inclosed should not become square—in fact, the wonder would be if it remained circular.

Any one with a garden may produce plant curiosities which will be interesting to all who see them. Arrange a saucer containing sweetened water under and close up to a young, healthy gooseberry bush, and so placed that the dead corolla of the flower (the tip at the end of the berry opposite the stalk) just touches the water. The young gooseberry drinks the water greedily, and if it is renewed as it is absorbed by the berry the gooseberry so treated assumes enormous proportions and specimens as large as good-sized hen's eggs may be produced.

Vapor Bath in Each House.

A vapor bath separate from the main building is a part of every house in Irkutsk. Stones are piled and heated in a fire and water is poured over them so that when the door is closed the steam fills the bathroom. The bathers, sitting on benches, steam their naked bodies both to cleanse themselves and relieve fatigue. They use a brush made of small cherry branches with leaves to strike themselves with for cleansing, and pour cold water from a small pail over their faces when the heat is too great. There is hot and cold water, as in a Japanese bath. From time to time they wash themselves and return again to the vapor. The vapor bath is prepared four times a month, and always in the evening before Sunday, when all the members of the family bathe, says Asia. There also are public baths in the city similar, but larger.

Poetic Justice.

A recent note on Admiral Sir Montague E. Browning recalls a good story told of him when commanding one of our battleships.

A "hard bargain" was brought before Captain Browning, charged with having broken his leave for more than 100 hours. The evidence being heard, the captain asked the defaulter: "Have you anything to say in your defense?"

"Nothing, sir," came the reply, "except that to err is human, to forgive divine—Shakespeare."

"Ninety days' detention without the option of a fine—Browning" was the ready if unpleasant rejoinder.—London Chronicle.

Properly Classified.

"Say, Bill, you didn't know that I was an electrician?" boasted Jack. "I missed my calling."

"How's that?"

"Why last night, over at Jane's the electric light fuse burnt out. Guess who fixed it. Me—I—myself."

"Huh—a final shot from Bill—'You're no electrician—you're just an idiot.'"

TAUNTED YOUTH
MADE "DARE" GOOD

New York Youngster, Chafed by Rivals, Sends Bullet Which Inflicts Fatal Wound.

New York.—A feud between two "gangs" of small boys in Yonkers, which was conducted without causing public annoyance and without the knowledge of the police, led to the shooting and instant death of William Berrigan, twelve years old, of 279½ Nepperham avenue. He was killed by the rival "gang" leader, Frank Ostrofsky, twelve years old, of 423 Walnut street, according to the police.

Ostrofsky fired a small revolver five times into the ground, and then being accused of having loaded the weapon only with blanks, aimed a shot at a tree 90 feet away. Berrigan, who had been hiding behind it, looked out just as Ostrofsky fired. The bullet entered his forehead. Ostrofsky fled with the members of his gang.

The shooting took place in the woods near Runsey road. Ostrofsky and his friends had gone there to roast potatoes and corn. In the party were John and Raymond Dynaicki, twelve and ten years old; Helen Ostrofsky, three years old, and other children. The fire had been banked and the potatoes were being roasted when William Berrigan and his brothers, John, seven, and Joseph, ten years old, came up with their cohorts.

The pluckers were startled by a hail of pebbles from slingshots of the Berrigan crowd, as the police gathered the story. Frank Ostrofsky shouted out to "quit it," but the fusillade continued.

Ostrofsky then pulled out the revolver. This move was met with jeers by the other side.

"Dare you to shoot! You wouldn't dare to put real bullets in!"

Ostrofsky gave a demonstration, he told the police. He had a cartridge belt with thirty-eight .32 caliber cartridges. He loaded the cylinder and shot five times in the ground and once in the air. At the reports the Berrigan crowd ducked to cover, but from that vantage point continued to jeer Ostrofsky.

"Well, I'll show you."

Ostrofsky loaded the revolver again and aimed at the tree as a target. He pulled the trigger. The elder Berrigan boy fell without making an outcry.

Ostrofsky was found at home and was locked up on the charge of juvenile delinquency. The revolver was found in a lot by boys hunting for a golf ball. Ostrofsky said he got it from another boy.

Safety Pins in Child's Throat for Two Years

Three safety pins, one of them opened, were removed from the throat of four-year-old Clara Kucher, of New York city. They had been lodged in the child's throat two years, according to Mrs. Anna Kucher, the mother.

When the pins were swallowed an examination was made, but it was decided they had been coughed out. Recently the child suffered from fever. An examining doctor found the pins and removed them without incision.

THIRSTY CAMEL RAIDS FAIR

Drinks Ten Gallons of Lemonade Before Arrested by Fifty Indianapolis Police.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Fifty Indianapolis policemen on special duty at the Indiana state fair were called upon to quell a camel which apparently had not had its drink during the last eight days.

It wandered from its own show grounds into a soft drink booth and drank ten gallons of red lemonade before the police and the camel trainer could get it back into "The Garden of Allah."

Bill, the Builder
Hits the Nail on the Head When He Says—

"'Tis Cheaper to Build Well at the Start Than to Make Repairs All Your Life"

Don't make the mistake of buying building material by price only. Under-size timbers that cannot stand the strain of weight are a poor investment at any price. A little careful attention to the requirements of your material will often save the expense of frequent repairs.
