Ancient Indian Pottery Discovered

Two attaches of the Smithsonian institution in Washington, scraping the earth from Indian water jars and other pottery dug up by Prof. J. A. Jeaucon of the institution in Taos, New Mexico. The jars are said to be over five hundred years old. The American southwest is full of all sorts of relics of the prehistoric people who inhabited this region. Cliff dwellings, pueblos, watch towers, ceremonial structures, irrigation systems are found in Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and Utah in endless variety. In the Mesa Verde national park in Colorado, Dr. J. Walker Fawkes of the Smithsonian institution, has been doing systematic excavations for several years with results that have attracted the attention of archaeologists the world over. In New Mexico, the country of the Jemez plateau is especially rich in relics. It is proposed to create here the National Park of the Cliff cities.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

SCOUT FIRE FIGHTERS

Twenty six Cashmere (Wash.) boy scouts, with their leaders, started in a big truck for an overnight camp, an all day trip which landed them in the beautiful Squakame creek valley at nightfall. They erected their shelter tents, had a big "feed" and a jolly campfire pow-wow. Shortly after taps a scout reported a fire visible down the canyon. In less than 30 seconds the troop was in formation ready for action. The Red Cross patrol under Senior Patrol Leader Gail Phillips was sent down the canyon with instructions to leave two scouts at the sawmill a mile away, another two at another point, etc., so that as soon as the fire was located a message could be relayed back to camp. Meanwhile two other patrols were equipped for fire fighting, and special orders given.

A few minutes later two boys of the first patrol brought back word that it was the mill which was on fire, and that they had left the other six scouts in the thick of it. One of the assistant scoutmasters and a few scouts, were left to guard the camp, as it was surrounded by valuable timber which might catch fire.

Scoutmaster Chichester and Assistant Braggons arrived at the scene of the disaster in a short time with an eager squad of workers. The few men in charge at the mill had about given up hope of saving anything from the flames, but the boys formed a bucket brigade from a nearby creek to the lumber piles, and by means of wet sacks put out new fires, which kept starting, while another crew wrecked the high tramway which was acting as a fuse and leading the fire from pile to pile of lumber. By 2 a. m. the fire was under control. The mill and a large amount of lumber had been destroyed, but thanks to the efforts of the scouts, two buildings, some furniture, two or three heavy wagons, and over 200,000 feet of lumber, some $3,000 worth in all, were saved. A weary but triumphant lot of boys hiked back to camp, leaving two of their number to patrol the fires until daylight. They did not climb the mountain the next day, as had been planned, but nobody was disappointed, as the troop had had enough thrills and hard work for one outing.

The work of the scouts received much well deserved praise, and the president of the lumber company whose property they had saved presented the troop with a $50 check in appreciation of the remarkable good turn, a gift that was accepted with the understanding that the money would be used to purchase needed equipment.

SCOUT LEADERS MEET.

The Pasadena boy scout, council had its annual meeting in January in the new mission patio of the Hotel Vista del Arroyo. After the meeting the council entertained all the local scoutmasters and troop committee with a banquet and "snappy" scout program. About one hundred men were present and voted the affair a great success.

SCOUT STUDY CONSTITUTION.

E. E. Givens of Great Falls, Mont., recently offered five prizes for the five best essays written by registered scouts of Great Falls on the subject of "The History of the Constitution of the United States." The contest is to be made an annual affair. This is an excellent way of intensifying interest in the history and government of our nation. Mr. Givens' lead might well be followed by other public-spirited citizens.
