Ex-Monmouth Pastor Paints and Preaches

Although the time-worn customs of "found" and "barrel" parties have long since ceased to exist, they never were of much significance to Rev. F. M. Fisher, pastor of the Milwaukie Evangelical church, who has a much newer and better method by which he covers his deficiencies in salary—but he insists that the deficiency in his case cannot be blamed upon his little congregation, for they are paying all that they can afford. Recent statistics have shown that a little over 9 cents each week is the contribution of over 30,000,000 Protestant church members in the country toward the maintenance of their ministry, but Rev. Mr. Fisher does not even need that. He is a painter by trade and although he points out that his calling of the ministry is his first duty, he still has time to ply the brush and to keep his family of three children and his wife living comfortably in their Milwaukie home. Eighteen years ago Rev. Mr. Fisher and Mrs. Fisher first settled in Milwaukie where he delivered his weekly sermons from the pulpit of the Milwaukie Evangelical church, but he has not spent all that time there. At the end of four years they moved to Jefferson, where the minister took over the pastorate of the church of his calling.

His stay in Jefferson was limited to two years, when he was transferred to Salem. A two-year period in Salem ended and he was sent to Seattle where he also spent two years, and from Seattle he took the jump back to Monmouth, where, after a two-year period, just six years ago he moved again to Portland and then was forced to devote all his time to plying his trade of painting.

This he did for several years, and then he moved out to the little West Portland community, where the calling of the pulpit again sent him into active preaching there, although he points out that the small congregation could not nearly afford to pay him a salary in this locality, so he kept up his work and preached on the side.

A year ago in May he was again asked to come to the Milwaukie Evangelical parsonage, where he now lives and where every Sunday he takes up his work in the pulpit. During the past winter his three children suffered from a great deal of sickness, and out of his meager earnings the minister found it a physical impossibility to pay the doctor and drug bills and still provide a living for the family. So to pay the doctor bills, Rev. Mr. Fisher has again taken up his paint brush and has a contract with his physician, Dr. L. L. Hewitt, whereby his bill will be settled when the residence is completely painted in its new coat.

"I may believe a little differently about this business than some people do", he said, "for I did not believe when I began my preaching that it was a profession. I felt the natural call to the pulpit and I do not think that any man should take up the ministry as a profession unless he is called. No; I had no idea of taking up the ministry when I arrived in the northwest from my old home state of Iowa," he continued. "That was in 1892 and I was a full-fledged painter and had come to the far west to try my fortune". "But it isn't so unusual for a preacher to be a painter also," he concluded, "for I have an acquaintance who gave up the ministry for the painting and paperhanging business a few years ago, and now he is making lots of money."

"I don't believe that is a reflection on him, though, for he had a large family and he had to take some other method of making his livelihood."

The Milwaukie painter-pastor is 54 years of age and strong and hale and looks as if he could handle many a painting job in the future if necessary. But he does not feel that he will do much more work of this nature after he gets the doctor bill paid. He finds that it takes too much of his time away from his calling, so he will be going back to Milwaukie to his pulpit work exclusively soon.—Oregonian.

FARM TOPICS

For a wormless, scabless and BIG apple,

Paul Carpenter,
Polk County Agent.

"In this beautiful orchard we never have had a commercial crop. We cultivate and spray and do everything we know to get good apples, but they are so small. No, we did not thin." You have heard the story, stuff is small.

There is a lot to the apple game besides thinning on the tree, but in this day we are not going to meet the demands of the trade without growing the fruit into the larger sizes.

That means healthy trees, cultivation and thinning.

As an example of what this thinning means, J. F. Slover, commercial grower at Freewater, Oregon did some systematic thinning last year and here is what happened:

Thinning treatment	Value per tree	Per acre
No thinning	$5.87½	$305.50
Thinned 3 to 4 inches	11.25	585.00
Thinned 6 to 7 inches	15.62½	812.50

This work practically trebled the income.

Four thinning demonstrations have been arranged as follows:

Friday, June 23, 9:30 J. F. Hicks orchard 1½ miles northwest of Dallas on Ellendale road. 1:30 Near Clearview Hall, Red Prairie.

Saturday, June 24, 9:30 Renfro orchard ½ mile west of Salem, on the paving. 1:30, J. J. Stratton orchard, Spring Valley.

C. L. Long, extension specialist, supervising.

No apple grower can afford not to give the closest attention to proper thinning practice.

Wednesday, June 21st is the Amity-McCoy dairy celebration. Time to tell the World that Amity and McCoy have a few cows and a lot of dairymen that are right on top of the job. So the proceedings start Wednesday at 10 when we meet at the Amity Cheese Factory—just a few moments to examine the plant and see what kind of a housekeeper Mr. McIntosh is, then hit the road to give the once over to a half dozen of those McCoy herds you have wanted to see: Kind of stock the men have, herd production, merit of the bulls, plans for improvement, outlook for the herds.

Noon to find us at Porter Frizzell's place for basket lunch with coffee by the Polk Farm Bureau and cream and milk from the Frizzell dairy.

An afternoon chuck full of good things of interest to dairy folks: J. D. Mickle to appear, C. L. Hawley will have a message Walter Fuller to tell us how things are lining up in the cheese business, Professor will put on a demonstration on judging a cow by the "way she's put up". A judging contest is being arranged between Yamhill and Polk teams—a chance for some of our cow sharps. Not a slack moment the entire afternoon.

Come out and take a look at your business. It will benefit you and perhaps the business too. Take the whole family by all means and make it a day. In honor of the foster mother of the human care.

P. S. Don't forget cups.

Paul Carpenter,
Polk County Agent.
