FARM TOPICS

Quick action in getting results of experiment station investigations into action on Oregon farms was said by the California legislative committee looking into agricultural college work to be one of O. A. C.'s most distinguished qualities. Farmers have gone the plan then in use one better recently by visiting the station in large bodies, seeing for themselves just what findings are of value and applicable to their conditions, and going home with the dope in their pockets for use—possibly the next day or that evening. Can you beat it?

The shrewdest of these farmers say that in one day they learn some things of great value that they have tried many years of actual farming to pick up without success. Among some score of things listed as highly useful information the following are frequently mentioned: By simply rotating crops—grain, corn and clover, say—net profits were increased by $8.82 per acre annually in rainfall farming and $14.09 in irrigation farming, farm manure realized $1 to $5 an acre annually for three years—light application; alfalfa on sandy loams of western Oregon yields an average of 4½ tons per acre annually over periods of 7 to 10 years—a most profitable forage crop; the best kinds of wheat to grow in each community to make production and marketing best; white lands can be tile drained and made to grow more than 2 tons of clover hay per acre; the new college bred vetch will succeed on many soils too wet for the common kinds, sheep are most economically kept on western Oregon farms by a combination of native and cultivated pasture—rape and clover being two good cultivated pastures; hogs can be profitably grown only for home market; Oregon grown clover seed is much the best for Oregon; clover and alfalfa may be protected largely from stem rot by clipping or pasturing before winter.

THE GOLDSTEIN SERVICE THAT MAY WEAR OFF

Nat Goldstein, who was dumped out of the Kansas City Post Office because he accepted $2,500 to boost Frank O. Lowden for the Presidency, looks happy in this picture; but did he wear this smile when Republicans and Democrats joined in denouncing him as an unhappy choice when President Harding named him to be Internal Revenue Collector for the St. Louis District?
