HAVE LAMPS FOR EVERY ROOM Decoration Available in Great Variety; Ostrich Feathers Among the Latest Styles.

Smart Traveling Coats.
Smart traveling coats out on very full lines are developed from grizzled woolens, usually in green tones as well as coarsely woven chevrons notably in yellow shades. Zerana oftentimes is used as a lining for these coats. Beige and sand woolens in rough weaves are used for street wraps made on straight lines. Colored embroidery and fancy girdles are a means of relieving the severity of the plain woolens.

Every room nowadays has its lamp.
In the living room there is a wide choice for table or floor lamps.
Wrought iron, mahogany and polychrome effects in either metal or wood form most of the lamp standards.
French, Gothic, English, Spanish and Italian styles are all good for bridge, plano and junior lamp effects.
As for shades there is infinite variety, too. Glass, parchment, silk, geor-gettes, wicker and even charming ostrich feathers are seen. A word about these new feather shades. Instead of being the fluffy affairs formerly constructed of the curly ostrich tips for boudoir lamps, these are long feathers, with the center ribs forming the sections of the lamp shade. A rose feather shade, for example, had each feather where it joined the next outlined with narrow black feather trimming, and the light shining colored velvet, with raw edges, fastened lightly to a white organdie frock,

The effect is charming. Grapes are used on some straw hats. They shine and shimmer and are fairly lustrous in quality which adds much to their decorative effect.

ALBATROSS FLIES 3,000 MILES Seattle, Wash.—Starting from a small solitary island near Japan a black-headed albatross followed a steamship across the North Pacific for six days and seven nights. It became an object of unusual interest among both passengers and crew and several big wagers as to its length of flight and duration of strength.
Meat and bread tossed to the bird during the day was picked up from the waves without the great wings being furled. For six days and seven nights the race kept all at fever heat with excitement, and when 3,000 miles from the Japanese island and following a greedy breakfast of meat and fish the albatross turned abruptly and was lost in the distant horizon. The ship was then 1,900 miles from the nearest Alaskan port, but the bird is believed to have flown straight home.

The Dissolution of J. and M.

By JANE OSBORN

There were four of them, Jean and Jane, Maud and Matilda, and they all lived together in a little white house in Hilton and taught school in the Hilton public schools.

"There's nothing to it," said Jean one evening after the supper dishes were out of the way and the four had gathered round the lamp that stood on the center table of their living room.

"Nothing to what?" said Jane, looking up from the algebra papers she was correcting.

"Nothing to school teaching," Jean explained. "You work like a horse all day with such big classes that about all you can do is to keep order and drive in enough facts to get the bright children to pass at examination. You come home tired."

"And what do you get?" Maud took up the refrain.

"A bare existence," sighed Matilda.
"And you never meet any one," Jean resumed. "Look at a stenographer.
Doesn't have to know half as much as a teacher and she meets men. She gets married or else she starts in business by herself and makes good money."

"I don't care about getting married," said Matilda. "But—" she hesi-tated and took a chocolate from the box of bonbons open on the table.

"Let's start in business, the four of us." It was Jane who made the proposition.

Then and there it was agreed that they should go into business with a capital B. In a few more months the school term would be over. They could start the day after school closed, see how they made out, and if prospects were good they would all hand in their resignations by August.
That would give the school board time enough to get other teachers.

"Let's make candy," said Jane, who had followed Matilda's example and was nibbling a chocolate cream.
"Sugar is six cents a pound at retail.
Chocolate is fifteen, and candy, that is mostly sugar and chocolate, sells for eighty cents a pound."

So it was agreed that they should start a candy business. Also it was agreed that they should operate under the name of the J. & M. company.
Then some one suggested that they must have capital. They must have a shop in a prominent place to sell their wares. They must start from the first with good equipment. They would need at least two thousand dollars, and their combined savings made only one thousand. Some one must get the necessary funds, and it was easy for Jane to persuade the others that Arthur Hayden, confirmed old bachelor and shrewd business man, should be approached. He was the town's richest man. He was most active in enforcing the latest amendment in Hilton. The fact that prohibition had created a keen demand for candy ought to be a good argument with him.

Lots were drawn, and before the school teachers retired that night it had been settled that Maud should undertake this quest of capital. The fates had decided wisely. Maud was aggressive and unafraid. She taught S-B boys because she had a firm command of herself at all times. Her eye was dark and steady and shyness had been left out of her makeup.
So Maud went to see Arthur Hayden. Arthur Hayden did not want to see her. He avoided her, but she was insistent. He was not especially attracted by her brisk manner and did not feel that the town of Hilton needed another candy store. Moreover, his own business, though in a prosperous condition, was in need of every bit of capital he could command.
But Maud came home with her pledge of a thousand dollars.

The next day she called again on Mr. Hayden and that night announced herself as out of the compact.

"Mr. Hayden has offered me a salary that amounts to twice what I am making now. He wants me to begin as soon as school is over. My first work will be to sell stock for Hayden and company."

The fact was that Mr. Hayden had been very favorably impressed with the selling ability of the young woman who had actually been able to convince him to subscribe a thousand dollars to a business enterprise in spite of himself. Mr. Hayden called several times on the teachers, and then one day he came with good news for Jane.

He was president of the local board of education. They were in need of a superintendent of elementary schools and Mr. Hayden, having looked up Jane's record as a teacher, had decided and convinced the board that she was the best candidate for that position. This meant double Jane's present salary. It meant an opportunity to use talent which she knew she possessed. So Jean and Matilda were sole survivors of the J. and M. company.

One hot day in July—after school had closed they started to work in the kitchen of the J. and M. company, where the temperature was ten degrees higher than it was in the sweltering street of Hilton. But Matilda stood over the kettles of boiling fudge and caramels with undaunted spirit.
It was she who had bought the equipment, she who had taken a week to work in a large candy kitchen in New York, she who had bargained with

COMPARE MERITS OF BREEDS

In Culling Operations in Indiana Standard Bred Hens Show Superiority Over Mergrels.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In Knex County, Ind., half the number of flocks of hens culled under the supervision of the county agent, employed co-operatively by the United States Department of Agriculture, the State Agricultural college, and the county, were standard bred and the other half mixed breeds, so their comparative merits could be considered through culling.

The 9 standard bred flocks numbered 1,087, while the 9 of mixed flocks numbered 1,103, or 16 more hens. The week before culling, the standard bred hens laid 2,906 eggs and the mixed breeds 2,547, or 352 less. In culling, 314 standard bred and 355 mongrel hens were removed from the flocks, leaving 773 standard bred and 738 mongrels, or 35 more standard breeds. Two owners of the standard bred flocks, being breeders, culled much closer than the owners of the mixed flocks. The week after culling the standard bred hens laid 2,724 and the mongrels 2,433 eggs.

The figures show that among the 1,087 standard bred hens there were 11 less culled than among the 1,103 of the mixed flocks, and that they laid 350 more eggs the week before culling and 291 more the week after.

CONTROL OF CHICKEN PESTS

Application of Blue Ointment Will Prove Efficacious, as Will Sodium Fluorid.

A study of the life of chicken lice shows that there are a dozen different kinds infesting the same bird. Most of them, however, frequent the rear part of the body at least once in every twenty-four hours where they obtain the necessary moisture for their life and growth. This moisture is obtained from around the vent.
This habit of lice would answer one method of treatment, the use of blue ointment.

Blue ointment applied around the vent and under the wing of each fowl affected seems to get rid of the lice in a very short time. A piece the size of a good sized pea is plenty for one bird. If the blue ointment is thick and heavy it should be melted so that it can be applied in a very thin layer. It is well to make a second application two weeks after the first, especially if the birds are badly affected.

Any of the advertised lice powders and many of the home-made powders seem to work very well. Good dust wallows handy to the poultry house also aid considerably in controlling this pest.
Sodium florid can also be used to control lice. This is a common preparation which can be obtained at any drug store. It is applied by what is known as the pinch method. A pinch should be worked into the fluff of the tail, a pinch under each wing, a pinch on the back, and a pinch worked into the neck feathers.

POULTRY NOTES

Regularity in feeding is one of the secrets of success with fowls.

The tamer the flocks the more valuable and profitable they usually are.

Separate the sexes at eight weeks old, or as soon as sex can be determined.

Move colony house or brooder coop to fresh ground before chicks are turned out.

The incubator is not only a necessity but an economy where early chicks are wanted.

The hen and the caretaker are partners in the poultry business. If either one is lazy the profits are less.

Do not expect to hatch more than 75 per cent of the total eggs incubated, either in machines or under hens.

An incubator often gets lots of blame that should be attached to the operator. When a machine is operated wrong the hatches will go wrong.

benefited by the use of these medicines that I was able to be up and about in two weeks. I was at the Change of Life when I began taking the medicines and I passed over that time without any trouble. Now I am hale and hearty, do all my housework, washing, ironing, scrubbing, and cooking, all there is to do about a house, and can walk two or three miles without getting too tired. I know of several of my neighbors who have been helped by your medicines."
