Rainbow Tints Reflected Light

Cornell Professor Explains What Causes Vivid Colors of Peacock Feathers.

SAME TINTS IN OIL PUDDLE

Colors Are Due to Interference of Light Reflected From Upper and Lower Surfaces of Film of Oil.

Pittsburgh.—A film of oil dropped on the pavement by an errant automobile contains the same color values as the highly decorative tail feathers of the peacock, said Dr. Wilder D. Bancroft of Cornell university, speaking at the general meeting of the American Chemical society.

"Everybody has noticed the brilliantly colored patches on the pavements where automobiles have spilled oil," said Doctor Bancroft. "The colors range from red to gold to blue and are very vivid or metallic. They change with the angle at which one sees them and they are not due to pigments, since we have a thin film of a nearly colorless oil.

"These colors are due to the interference of light reflected from the upper and lower surfaces of the film and they depend on the thickness of the film, which averages about one fifty-thousandth of an inch. They are more vivid when oil is spilled on an asphalt pavement than when on a dirt road because there is less disturbing light reflected from the black background.

Feathers Are Iridescent.

"The brilliant colors of the tail feathers of the peacock and the apparently self-luminous reds in the throat feathers of the humming bird are not due to pigments. When one looks through a peacock's feathers one sees only a brown due to the so-called melanin pigment which is equivalent to the asphalt pavement. In all the iridescent feathers the barbules are flattened plates of brown which therefore give the colors of thin films. The structure is so marked that an expert

"Dead" Opossum Revives and Car Runs Into Ditch

When a "dead" opossum came to life and peered over the shoulder of the man who was driving a car in which the animal was being given a ride, an automobile ran into a ditch near Vincennes, Ind., and was wrecked. The driver was not injured.

William W. Cassell was driving the car which hit the opossum. Thinking that the animal was playing dead, Cassell struck it several times with a wrench and threw it into the back of his car. The animal's head appearing later over his shoulder caused the man to lose control of the machine.

not an albino in the sense of merely having no dark pigment. The whole structure of the feathers has changed. The barbules are not flat plates and consequently no brilliant colors can be developed by dyeing the feather brown or painting the back with India ink."

NO FLYING FISH AT MANDALAY

Sea Over 100 Miles Away and China Isn't Across the Bay—Kipling in Error.

Mandalay, Burma.—With its thousand pagodas, its deserted palaces and its picturesque ruins, the city of Mandalay continues to be a place of chief attraction for the European or American visitor to Burma.

The palace grounds, surrounded by a wall and moat, are about a mile and a half square. The buildings have a cheap gaudiness about them which compares in many ways to that of an American street carnival. Still preserved are the throne rooms and the apartments of the king, the senior queens. Mindon Min, the next to the last king of Burma, married 57 wives—seeking, evidently, to discover what the "57 varieties" are like.

From the palace grounds an American taxi takes the visitor to the foot of Mandalay hill, one of the holy places of Burma Buddhism. Here those who are adherents of the Buddhist religion and are willing to remove their footwear may obtain great merit by climbing the nearly 400 steps which lead to the summit.

Many Americans have been confused as to the exact location of Mandalay by a couple of geographical errors which occur in Kipling's well-known poem. It could hardly be "where the flying fishes play," when the sea is over a hundred miles distant. And China isn't "just across the bay," but is just across the mountains instead. Just across the bay is India.

Million Visit Three Shrines

MANY CLIMB BIG MONUMENT

Big Share of Guests in National Capital Make Trip to Mount Vernon—Recently Completed Lincoln Memorial Popular.

Washington.—More than 1,000,000 persons make pilgrimages each year to Washington's home, Mount Vernon, the beautiful Lincoln memorial and the Washington monument, the latter being the most popular of the three shrines among visitors to the national capital.

Visitors numbering 34,113 went during July to the top of the Washington monument, located a few hundred yards south of the White House. More than one-fifth of them clambered up the 898 steps in order to see the memorial tablets on the various landings inside the shaft. The remainder rode to the top in the electric elevator which has a capacity of 35 persons. More than 5,250,000 people have visited the top of the monument since it was opened for observation purposes October 9, 1888. No entrance fee is charged.

Lincoln Memorial Popular.

The Lincoln memorial, recently completed and opened to the public, was visited by 31,883 persons during July. Located in Potomac park, directly west of the Washington monument, it is rather inaccessible for pedestrians; visitors usually go there by automobile. On a recent Sunday 2,000 persons were recorded as entering the great building. It is rapidly becoming a shrine for tourists. No entrance fee is charged.

Washington's old home at Mount Vernon on the Potomac river in Virginia, 16 miles from Washington, long has been the mecca of pilgrims from every part of the world, who go by steamboat, electric train and automobile. Kept as nearly in its original state as possible by the Ladies Mount Vernon association, it is a delight to all Americans. During July approximately 20,000 persons visited Mount Vernon and during the year admissions numbered 236,000. The proceeds of a 25-cent entrance fee help keep the estate in first-class condition.

The house where Abraham Lincoln died, located opposite Ford's theater at 516 Tenth street, Northwest, this city, is another shrine visited by many tourists. It was bought by the United States in 1896 for $30,000.

DIG UP PREHISTORIC BONE

Echinodermante Probably Roamed in Region Thousands of Years Ago, When It Was Marsh.

Boonville, Mo.—Workmen excavating for pier No. 2 for the new highway bridge across the Missouri river at Boonville ran across what has been declared to be part of the vertebra of the echinodermante, an animal that was in existence thousands of years ago.

This echinodermante, no doubt, roamed the fields about what is now Boonville at a time when it was a marsh. His genus is now extinct and it took a long time to find someone who could give the prehistoric bone its proper classification.

W. R. Criswell, carpenter foreman on the bridge, has had the bone polished and varnished and will keep it as a souvenir.

Old Lady of Threadneedle Street to Be Remodeled

The "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street," otherwise the Bank of England, will undergo many changes, and "has definitely made up her mind to go in for a new outfit." The stodgy building in the heart of the city of London is to be rebuilt according to plans of the architect, Herbert Baker. To provide the accommodation which has become necessary, an entire reconstruction of the interior of the building will have to be carried out.

King Lops Off $50,000 Yearly

George of Great Britain Forced to Effect Economies in Expense of Household.

CUTS DOWN HIS RACING STUD

In Spite of Rise in Cost of Living, King Has Resolutely Declined to Ask Nation for Any Increase in Grant.

London.—King George has set yet another example which may advantageously be followed by thousands of his subjects. As a result of recent economies in the king's household an annual saving of something like $50,000 is being made. This is the result of the special investigation the king ordered some months ago, when, in order to achieve economies in accordance with the spirit of the time, he directed that the whole organization of the royal household should be overhauled. The work of reorganization at Buckingham palace, Windsor castle and other royal residences has been in progress ever since. Its completion, with the saving mentioned, is naturally a matter of satisfaction to the king, whose financial resources are probably much overestimated in the public mind. Moreover, the economy has been secured without the efficient and effective administration of the royal household being impaired in the slightest. It has to be borne in mind that the amount of money granted by the house of commons annually for the maintenance of the crown and the royal household remains at the same figure as in 1914.

Refuses to Ask Increase.

In spite of the general rise in the cost of living and of all commodities, the king has resolutely declined to apply to the nation for any increase. This has meant, inevitably, that he has had to draw heavily upon his private resources during the past eight years—to an extent that would cause considerable surprise could the figures be published. In his task of reducing expenses the king has been fortunate in having the assistance of so experienced and astute a financier as the veteran Viscount Farquhar, lord steward of the household. This is not the first instance in which Lord Farquhar has been called upon to act in this capacity. He served King Edward in similar fashion after he came to the throne, when it was found that the entire royal household required to be remodeled, and the many sinecures that had grown up during the later years of the reign of Queen Victoria rigorously abolished.

Early in the present year Lord Farquhar was able to submit a balance sheet showing how the money was being expended in the royal household and where reductions might profitably be made without any loss of efficiency. This the king considered for some days with very particular care, and in the end gave it his hearty approval, and this work of reorganization at his various residences went forward. In the meantime his majesty decided it was necessary for him to retrench his personal expenses in every manner possible. Therefore he gave directions that his racing stud be cut down to a minimum and that no unnecessary expense was to be incurred in connection with his stables. He decided, as a farther economy, that his famous old racing cutter Britannia should not be put into commission this year. This, however, had an effect upon which the king had not calculated.

Britannia to Race Again.

The withdrawal of the yacht from the races in which it was customary for it to take part in the past led to other owners of big yachts deciding to lay their boats up. An unfortunate blow was thus hit at the sport, and not a little unemployment was caused among those who had been accustomed to man these large racing craft. This aspect of the matter was brought to the notice of the king when he was staying at Cowes re-

Awaits Wife's Return 37 Years; Then Dies

Honolulu, T. H.—Colburn H. Maemae, Hawaiian, waited 37 years for his wife, Emily, to return to him before he brought suit for divorce on the ground of desertion, he testified at the hearing of his case.

Maemae and his wife were married in Ewa, Aahu, in 1884, the year following the coronation of King Kalakaua. She left him four months after the marriage. Since then he has waited for her return, but finally decided she "meant to stay away," he said.

Mrs. Maemae now is a "fisher-lady" and resides on one of the small islands in Kailih harbor, adjoining Honolulu bay.

WAR OFFICER WEARS $9 SUIT

John Martyn Sets Example for Rigid Economy With Clothes Made From Flour Sacks.

Washington.—An example of economy in line with that now exercised throughout the army has been set the civilian employees of the War department by John Martyn, private secretary to the secretary of war. He is boasting the cheapest suit of clothes ever worn by a department officer, proudly admitting that it was fashioned from three flour sacks, purchased in Panama at a cost of $1 each. The tailor's fee brings the total cost of an outfit to $9, Mr. Martyn said.

TREE SET BY KING IS DEAD

Soil in Front of Pennsylvania Capitol Is Too Rich for Tree Planted by Belgian Monarch.

Harrisburg, Pa.—The larch tree planted by the king of the Belgians at the time of his visit to Harrisburg in 1920 and the companion tree planted in honor of Queen Elizabeth in front of the state capitol have died because the ground was too rich. The trees were planted in the midst of flower beds where the soil has been fertilized for more than a century for gardening purposes.

The Foch tree planted by the French marshal is thriving.

Yank Relief Cuts Russ Cholera.

At Age of Nine Months Boy Whistles Fluently

Youngstown, O.—Claim is made that Mervin, nine-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Heyman of this city, "can whistle like a canary." "He's been whistling since he was six months old," declared the proud father. "I'm sure he is the champion baby whistler of the world. Why, when that boy grows up he ought to be in great demand. Think what Mr. Sousa would give to have such a whistler in his band!"
