good price for the product.

The California Packing company, a strong corporation, offers to pay from 2½ cents a pound to 1½, according to size, on delivery, and go into the market and try and make a record upon which it can get future business.

A committee that came out of meetings held at the instance of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, has before the growers a proposal that all go into a pool and have one selling agency.

And now comes the national Farm Bureau with an offer to bring into the territory a man who will tell the growers how they can market their product through the selling agencies affiliated with the Farm Bureau.

At a meeting held in the Dallas Commercial Club rooms Saturday, J. F. Burton, a member of the executive committee of the Farm Bureau, laid his proposals before the assembled members of this organization. His offer to send to Polk county a representative of the National Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers' association, was accepted and a meeting will be called as soon as it is known when this man can be here. Mr. Burton told those present that the marketing agency in question has more than 200 representatives in the various trade centers of the east and middle west, and that it has been highly successful in disposing of fruit and vegetables. He said that he believed the prune situation for this year can be solved through the proposed medium.

By a vote of the meeting it was unanimously agreed that an effort shall be made to sell the prunes, for which there seems to be no immediate cash demand, in this manner. It is thought that the Federated man will be here within two weeks.

Publication of attacks upon the contract offered the growers by the California Packing company has had a diverse effect. Some of the growers, quite a large per cent in fact, take the position that the company has injured its standing by making such a proposal. The argument is that the company could, as charged, use the prunes that it secures on such a contract to break the market from time to time, to the decided injury of the business. On the other hand, many of the growers have done business with the concern for years and hold that it is acting in good faith and will do its best to get a good price for the growers that go into the proposed co-operative arrangement. The growers who take this position insist that the California Packing company, feeling that co-operative selling is going to be the thing, and desiring to stay in business is ready to enter the competitive field against the co-operative organizations and stand or fall with the results achieved. In fact, this is the position taken by the officers of the company.

All this agitation, which has brought out the fact that the prune crop of the country this year will not exceed the consumption of last year, has caused a feeling of optimism upon the part of the growers. These now feel that they will be able to dispose of their crop without doubt, and at a price that will yield some profit. While these various co-operative propositions have for the time driven from the field the independent canners and packers, it is confidently expected that the situation will improve within the next week or so. An instance of this possible outcome is found in the fact that it is expected that within a few days the Dallas cannery, idle so far this year, will reopen and put up a pack of prunes and apples, specializing on prunes.
