

Swiftly Pass The Days

Just a few more tomorrows—then Christmas. Repeated once more will be the story of the Christmas rush with its hustle, hurry and snap decisions. But wise folks—those with vision—will not be in that last minute stampede. They will do their Christmas shopping now.

Quietly, leisurely, and much more satisfactorily can you now make your selections from our wonderful stock of holiday jewelry.

No gift can delight more than that of jewelry. Articles essential to mere existence are gifts of bread and butter—jewelry is spice.

Harvard University Seen by Westerner

The following is an interesting letter received by Del T. Harmon from a chum of the military camp who has gone to Harvard to finish his legal education.

Your good letter came a few days ago, but school work has been very pressing so I have delayed writing. While in San Francisco, I wrote you of our safe trip from Seattle via several Puget Sound ports. We were in San Francisco about three days.

Outside Golden Gate the sea was perfect, but the fog was quite dense at times. We passed Point Honda—the place of the naval disaster of seven destroyers—just the afternoon before. I remember seeing it with all the rocks and the sea dashing against them. We ran at half speed part of the time and took frequent soundings when the fog was thickest. As it was, we had a narrow escape from colliding with the S. S. Harvard which was going from San Pedro to San Francisco.

The one day on which we stayed at the harbor of Los Angeles happened to be the day of the total eclipse of the sun. It was quite an education to witness such an event right where it was total at 1:15 P. M. It was so dark for about five minutes that autos had on their lights; the ships had on their running lights.

We departed that night, September 10th for a seventeen day trip through the Panama canal to New York. The sea was perfect. The ship was the second largest American freighter—a wonderful ship on which to go to sea. The beautiful sunrises and sunsets cannot be described. We passed several ships, and arrived at the canal September 20th in the morning. We did not stop but went straight through.

It was quite an experience to go through those locks in a large ship. They are just as the pictures show them to be, all the way from the electrical donkeys to the colored cable handlers. From the Pedro Miguel Locks on the Pacific side to the entrance to Gatun Lake, the canal is nothing but a ditch with banks about thirty feet high, except at Culebra cut. Many places of popular interest, told of in the newspapers, were easily discernible.

The scenery in Gatun Lake was wonderful. You have doubtless seen pictures of the wonderful, thick tropical vegetation, so green; and contrasting so strongly with the reddish brown soil. The native villages were also most interesting. Everything was to be seen except the enchantment which is described in books. It was as much reality as our towns in the West.

On our way north, after leaving the canal, we saw Jamaica, Haiti, Cuba, and several other places of interest. It took nearly seven days to make

"How I Cleared the Mill of Rats,"

By J. Tucker, R. I.

"As night watchman believe I have seen more rats than any man. Dogs wouldn't dare go near them. Got $1.25 pkg of RAT-SNAP, inside of 6 weeks cleared them all out. Killed them by the score every night. Guess the rest were scared away. I'll never be without RAT-SNAP." Three sizes 35c, 65c, $1.25. Sold and guaranteed by, PERKINS PHARMACY the trip to New York. There we saw the Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, the crowded harbor, and a hustle that we had not experienced since leaving San Francisco.

My stay in New York city was brief, but I can say that I felt like a country "rube" in a large city. I came to Boston by train, and on to Cambridge by subway.

Harvard University is situated in what you might call an educational center. I couldn't tell you the number of schools and similar institutions of learning that are located in Boston and the surrounding vicinity. For a men's school, Harvard has an excellent location. Cambridge is a close suburb of Boston. All the streets are paved and about a half mile apart there are special places of business—as a bank or two, several drug stores, department stores, etc.

The University occupies several blocks, not including some departments with buildings further out. Of course some private residences are intermingled with college buildings. At first I had some difficulty telling which were which.

Many of the older buildings are of the ancient style, rectangular with small doors and no porches. They are mostly of brick, covered with ivy. There seems to be no order in the way the buildings are arranged. However, the buildings of later years are like our public buildings out West. The style and architecture is quite a contrast to the buildings of Revolutionary Days.

Over the entrances to many of the buildings are verses or comments on the value of wisdom. At different places about, there are tablets or plates telling of the happening of some historical event of Revolutionary times. People here seem to be devoted to historical events.

Last Sunday I took a long walk all about Boston. I saw many other places of historical interest. Do you remember the Boston Tea Party, the Battle of Bunker Hill, the Old North Church of Paul Revere fame, the Boston Massacre, the old South Meeting House, the Old State House, and lots of other places. They seem to be so thick that a person living here would soon get tired reading all the tablets and plates. But of course, it is intensely interesting when one realizes that the Revolutionary war had its center along this coast. Lexington is near by and also Concord, both of which I intend to visit soon.

At first things seemed very strange and queer; the people and also the ancient, conservative styles. Then, too, this affected Bostonian accent, which I had at first intended to cultivate, is so noticeable. But of course I will get used to all these New England characteristics after I am here awhile. This would be one dreary place to live permanently, and I'm certainly glad I am going back to good America next spring when school is out. This is certainly New England.

The Law School is attended by fellows from all over the world. That makes it very interesting and also inspirational. I like my work fine. The teachers are of the best and the libraries most complete.

I often think of our good times at the military camp this last summer. This strange institution is one big contrast. Yesterday the young people of Epworth church went to the Blue Hills, where we had one fine time, playing, hiking, picture taking, eating, boating and singing. It reminded me of Fort Worden, very much. So you see Harvard is not all formality and study, but it is really what the students want to make it.

We debated Oxford last Monday night and lost by a popular assembly vote of 519 to 1748. I voted for Oxford for they certainly did fine. The debate was held in the famous Symphony Hall in Boston.

Football spirit is high and all efforts are being centered on beating Yale.

I trust this letter finds you well and prospering.

Your friend of the Military Camp,
Cyril D. Hill
