NEW FARM PRODUCE PLAN IS FAVORED BY GOVERNOR

Need for an agricultural program for Oregon was stresed by W. J. Kerr. president of the state college, and Walter M. Pierce, governor of Oregon, before the agricultural economic conference, Wednesday. Several hundred farmers, bankers, and others interested in promoting agriculture, were registered for the conference, all sections of the state being represented.

"Markets for our staples are now world-wide where once they were entirely local," said President Kerr. who explained the purpose of the conference. "To meet the new conditions, increasing in complexity with the progress of our civilization, there must be a reorganization of our agriculture.

"The farmers are not prospering, but are struggling against tremendous difficulties. Conditions have aroused wide-spread interest in agriculture and a determination to relieve its distresses and place it on an equal footing with other esssential industries."

That prosperity will come to the farmer who perseveres in an intelligent program of production and marketing was the conviction expressed by Governor Pierce. The problems of the farmer, with suggestions on how to meet them were outlined by the governor.

"Increase the production of articles you can sell close at hand, produce those you can ship in concentrated form without heavy shipping costs, eliminate as far as you can those products which we must sell outside the state, confine wheat growing to eastern Oregon, and increase prodection of dairy products, poultry, and hogs," were the governor's recommendations to the farmers.
