Mrs. Culver. Mrs. Culver talked to the students telling of the various types of programs, and the urgent needs for them. As far as possible teachers are trying to arrange entertainments that will take little or no time from actual classwork! In developing this plan little skits suggested by different studies may be worked into clever presentations.

The ideas both as to the plot of the programs given, and those of costume will be of great benefit to all those who will teach in districts where these two necessities depend wholly upon them.

Mrs. Culver divided the class into groups and placed a leader over each one. It is the responsibility of the leader to see that his group has a program to give sometime during the term.

this part, try to forget.

Signed: John L. Anderson. How easily all difficulties could have been adjusted in the right way, if it had been known. But it is often so, we try so hard, because of foolish pride, to bear burdens alone, burdens which perhaps someone would be glad to lift for us.

fort to engage the United States government in the electric power business was expressed by the Investment Bankers association of America at a meeting of the Board of Governors, held in Chicago, recently, in a resolution condemning the Swing-Johnson bill now pending in congress, which proposes the construction by the government of a high dam in the Colorado river at Boulder, Colorado under the guise of flood protection.

In connection with the resolution it may be recalled that Congressman E. O. Leatherwood of Utah, a member of the committee on irrigation and reclamation, recently stated in his minority report on the Swing Johnson bill that he found the measure one which would seek to bestow special advantages to one state at the expense of her sister state, and the public at large. He furthermore stated that he found it backed by clever propaganda and personal appeal, and masquerading under false colors and a concealed attempt to thrust the government into business on a large scale and that the purpose of flood control and reclamation can all be covered at much less expense.
