James Moore was acquitted at La Grande last week, after the jury had deliberated a period of 12 hours. He was charged with killing a negro sheepherder recently. The jury exonerated him on the ground that he shot in self-defense.

Booth's jewelry store at Clatskanie was broken into last week and almost all the goods in the display window stolen. The robber broke a pane of glass and grabbed what he could reach and disappeared before the family, who lived above the store, were able to get downstairs.

Fall fishing has been nearly abandoned on all parts of the Columbia river. The catches of the gillnetters have not been large enough to justify their continuing. The fall season has been a dismal failure from start to finish and no class of gear has made any money. The same is true of the few canneries that have operated.

The fuel famine which was becoming serious in Vale and other towns in that territory was temporarily relieved last week by the arrival of a car of coal. This will not last long, and unless the railroad ships more in during the next few days Vale will again have to fall back upon sagebrush, the only local fuel available. The nearest timber is 60 miles away.

Leaning out of a window in his room in Portland, last week, H. B. Mitchell, a middle-aged merchant who formerly lived at The Dalles, lost his balance and fell from the second story to the back yard, where he was found in an unconscious condition. His breath of air may cost him his life, for he is seriously injured and it is believed that his neck was broken by the fall. The surgeons attending him are uncertain as to his recovery.

The smallest voting precinct in Wasco county and, in all probability the smallest in the state, is that of Deschutes, near the dividing line between Wasco and Sherman counties. It has but 11 registered voters. Six of these were at the polls on election day from 8 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock in the afternoon, acting as clerks and judges. They were not rushed with work on that day, for the remaining five voters had the whole day in which to cast their votes.

Butte township, 14 miles southwest of Prineville on the road to Bend, is driving a deep artesian well in an effort to obtain a sanitary supply of water. All water for domestic use is now drawn from the irrigating canals, which before reaching Powell Buttes, cover a distance through the desert of 30 miles or more. The well-drillers are now down 900 feet, and at this depth some water is reported, but not in satisfactory quantity. The drilling will be prosecuted to a depth of 1500 feet if necessary.

In response to a great many inquiries, the attorney-general holds that the assessment of bank stock as required by the law of 1907 must be determined by adding the stock surplus and undivided earnings, and taking from that sum the investments or real property made by the bank. This will give the stock upon which the banks under the new law must pay taxes.
Guy W. Talbot, general manager of the Oregon Electric Company, has returned from New York with authority to expend $600,000 on new equipment and extensions to the line. He has recommended to the board the construction of a line from Tigardville, on the Portland-Salem line, to McMinnville. The extension of the Salem line as far as Albany may also be undertaken if traffic conditions this winter warrant early commencement of the work.
A farming demonstration train will arrive in Corvallis November 6 and will tour the Willamette Valley in connection with the Agricultural College. The train will consist of seven cars and lectures will be given from each car. One will be devoted to grasses, grains and modern machinery; one to dairying, livestock and milk testing; another to horticulture, budding, grafting, spraying and improved methods of packing fruit. A full demonstration of the latest methods of agriculture and animal husbandry will be given by members of the college faculty.

DOINGS IN OREGON

Interesting Items Gathered From All Parts of the State.

Valuations of Railroads Low.

Salem—The facts recently gathered by the Oregon Railroad Commission regarding the original cost and the estimated cost of reproduction of the lines and equipment of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and the Corvallis & Eastern furnish the basis for some interesting comparisons with the figures shown in the summaries of county assessments filed in the office of the Secretary of State.

Railroads and their equipment, according to their showing, are assessed at only one-third of their cost.

At the last hearing it was shown that the lines and equipment of the O. R. & N., exclusive of three of its branch lines, cost, down to date, over $22,000,000. With these branch lines figured in the total would be over $25,550,000. According to estimates of the cost of reproducing the lines and equipment, made by the company's engineer, it would cost about $28,000,000 to rebuild the lines and replace the equipment.

The total assessed valuation of all the railroads in Oregon is $36,556,000 and this includes the rolling stock of street railways, which are not segregated in the report from the rolling stock of steam roads. The total assessed valuation of all the roads is less than the actual cost of the material property of one road, and that considerably less than one-half the total mileage in the state.

Where His Money Came From.

Halsey—A young man named Floyd Dyar recently flashed like a brilliant meteor in the midst of Halsey's smart set. No youth in this community ever wore such stunning garb; none ever spent money with such lavish hand. The whisper went around that his father was very rich but inclined to niggardliness, allowing his son only $50 a month for spending money.

But during the past few days letters from Indiana relatives—unfamiliar letters—have been reaching different officials around Halsey, begging them to go and see Floyd Dyar, who was lying near death at Hotel Halsey of typhoid fever, while loved ones at home were sleepless from anxiety.

His father, B. F. Dyar, of Worthington, Ind., wrote that he had not heard from his son for three weeks, although he had written every three days since his illness. Rumor places the amount sent young Dyar by various sympathetic relatives from $150 to $200. He has one brother who is a prominent minister in Indiana. He still boards at Hotel Halsey.

Willow Creek Dam to Be Rebuilt.

Vale—J. W. Richards, of Seattle and a party of the Colorado capitalists interested in the promotion of the Willow Creek irrigation project which contemplates the watering of over 100,000 acres of land in the Willow Creek Valley adjacent to this city, paid a brief visit to Vale last week, and while here sold to a Denver investor who accompanied the party a tract in the valley comprising 320 acres for $32,000. The promoters of the project have disposed of sufficient bonds to enable them to go right ahead with the construction of the dam at the head of the creek, and they are confident they will have water through the valley by the next irrigation season.
The company contemplates the construction of an electric railroad through the valley to Vale, utilizing its irrigation works for power purposes, and a line from here to Ontario also is under consideration.

Had Any Psychic Experience?

Salem—Professor Edwin Tausch, Ph. D., one of the new professors in the university, who occupies the chair of philosophy, wants answers to the questions as to whence we came, whither we go and what we are here for? He has issued circulars and asks any one who has had any peculiar experiences to relate them with full attending circumstances. He says: "Write out such information as you can recall about those periods in your past life when you were perplexed over the purpose or meaning of your own existence and the world about you; likewise about the times and occasions, if any, in which an old view of your relation to God and your fellow-men was confirmed, or a new prospect opened before your inner vision."
He wants the age of the person at the time of the experience, and a statement of the occurrences and circumstances that brought on the experience; also a description of the peculiar feelings accompanying it.

Firebug in Baker City.

Baker City—Fire believed to have been of incendiary origin was discovered Saturday morning in the tower of the North Baker City school building, one of the most substantial and commodious structures for school purposes in Eastern Oregon. When the fire department arrived the building was a seething furnace and was quickly destroyed. The building was completed last year at a cost of $20,000. The school board carried an insurance of but $7500 on the building and $1000 on the furniture and equipment.
