Lighting the Fire.

A fire broke out one night in one of the smaller towns of Massachusetts, whereupon its newly equipped fire department, composed of volunteers, was called on to show what it could do.

Only one lantern could be found, the smoke was pouring out of the building, and the night was dark. Finally a small tongue of fire appeared and a cheer went up as the firemen turned the hose in that direction.

At that moment the captain cried out: "Look out what you're doing there! It's the only light we've got to put out the fire."—Lipincott's.
