Havana.—That American intervention will not be needed to end the uprising of negroes of the island was the emphatic assertion of the officials at the palace.

The exchange of cablegrams between President Gomez and President Taft has led to a more definite understanding regarding the attitude of the United States toward Cuba. President Gomez' message against American intervention drew a response from President Taft, in which assurances were given that the action of the American government was merely a measure of precaution and entirely dissociated from any question of intervention.

The impression is general that the removal of the fear of intervention will greatly strengthen popular support of the government.

Santiago, Cuba.—Generals Estenoz and Ivnnet, the leaders in the revolutionary rising, have declared their intention to carry on the war whether the United States intervenes or not, until the Morua law had been repealed. This law provides that there shall be no recognition of political parties on racial lines and is offensive to the negroes.
