CATHOLIC CHURCH

Everybody welcome.

HAS THE QUALIFICATIONS

One more word to the voters before the votes are cast for county officers next Tuesday, J. B. Teal, whose ad appears elsewhere in this issue, should receive the large vote he deserves from every section of the county. It is seldom that any county has an opportunity to select such a man for the office of county judge. The qualifications for this office in a county like Polk are thorough business ability, a real knowledge of the roads and bridges and their cost, and lastly, a disposition to be fair and honest to every man and every section of the county.

Mr. Teal is a man with these qualifications. No mistake should be made in this matter, and The Enterprise hopes that Independence and the southern part of the county will give Mr. Teal practically a unanimous vote, regardless of party ties.

Elmer E. Paddock, of this city, the Republican nominee for representative for this county, has resided here for twenty-one years, during which time he has been identified with the commercial and industrial interests of Polk county. Mr. Paddock has made success in his business life, is held in high esteem by those with whom he has long been associated and is a man of honest purposes and one who, as representative, will serve his county faithfully and intelligently.

Mr. Paddock will be affected in his service by no clique or faction, and is a man who will bring credit to his constituency. He will be found continually working for the interests of all the people, and The Enterprise is confident that he will favor no legislation calculated to increase the burdens of taxation, but on the contrary will support all measures which will bring them relief.

Indications strongly favor his election by a good majority and we predict his constituency will not regret having thus honored him.

FOR HIS FRIENDS SAKE

Geo. A. Wells, the Republican candidate for county commissioner, is so well known in Polk county that any form of introduction other than his name is scarcely necessary. And wherever
