HOME MASSAGE TREATMENT

Method by Which the Busy Woman May Keep Herself in Good Physical Condition.

In an article in the Woman's Home Companion on Massage, appears the following:

"Even a woman who has but little time to devote to it may have a good complexion and not get sallow and wrinkled. These exercises, planned originally for the business woman, are equally good for the tired housemother."

"Here is what you need: Plenty of soft water; one pound of finely ground oatmeal from the grocer; a bottle of almond oil, or a jar of good cold cream; a packet of fuller's earth for face powder; a cup of boiling milk every night."

"Pour half or a quarter of the cup of boiling milk into the washbasin, and quickly with your hands rub the milk all over your face several times. Rub it well in; wash in it, little as it is. I still declare, after many years, that there is nothing in the world so refreshing and soothing after a hard day's work as this. The milk in the basin is black? Yes, it always is. It cleanses the skin thoroughly. Now slip the rest of the cupful of milk very slowly. Nothing like hot milk for over-tired, strained nerves."

"Remove bolster and pillow from the bed; lie down absolutely flat on your back for at least five minutes, arms extended, feet extended; draw several deep sighing breaths, release them very slowly, relax every muscle in your body. Then moisten finger tips with cold cream or almond oil, and for ten minutes or a quarter of an hour, still lying down, very, very lightly do the simple exercises, and do not forget, whatever you do, that hard pressure will ruin any skin, by stretching it. Then, with a soft rag, wipe off the superfluous oil. In the morning take some oatmeal in the palm of the left hand, mix a little hot water with it to form a paste, and rub it well over the face. Rinse it off and dry your face with a soft towel, using the three exercises. If your skin is shiny, dust over lightly with cotton wool dipped in fuller's earth. These exercises must be done regularly every evening."

"Beauty points: Paint is dirt on the face, and means dirt on the mind. Get a good sleep before twelve o'clock at night. Fresh air means a fresh skin; sleep with your bedroom window wide open, top and bottom."

Valuable Information.
Silks have been so fashionable this summer that a hint on their preservation will not come amiss. When they are put away they should not be folded in white paper, for the chloride of lime used in bleaching the paper is apt to spoil the color of the silk.

Shrink First.
New stockings will last twice as long without wearing into holes if they are shrunk before being worn. Wash them in warm water, to which a little ammonia has been added. Wring out and dry, and you will be delighted with the results.

SERGE COSTUME.

A pale delicate shade of gray serge is chosen for our smart model, which has a Russian coat, with the basque slightly eased to the stitched band. Several rows of stitching finish the edges, also the revers and collar, which are of pastel blue cloth. Frills of lawn are worn at the wrists.

The skirt is quite plain, and is cut to just escape the ground. Bowler hat of gray pedal straw, trimmed in front with a fancy button and a feather mount.

Materials required: Four and one-half yards serge 44 inches wide, one-half yard blue cloth 40 inches wide, eight buttons, five yards silk for lining coat.

Black Chintzes.
With the black painted English furniture, which is again somewhat in favor for American houses, there is being used the background chintzes and cretonnes, on which the same garlands, flower baskets, festoons and medallions that decorate the furniture are profusely scattered.

Other hangings which are used with the painted furniture are those of printed linens which should have light backgrounds, says the New York Herald, and so remove the objection that some may find to the background chintzes.

The old designs may be matched exactly in the chintzes and linens, and in addition to their use as hangings these fabrics are used for the loose cushions which are needed to make the cane and rush seated chairs comfortable.

ARMOR MAY BE ABANDONED

Cost and Weight on Battleships Out of All Proportion to Value as Protector.

Will battleships soon be built without armor protection? Many naval experts believe that they will. The protective power of armor plate has increased only 2.3 times in fifty years, whereas the power of gun fire has increased in the same period eight times. The result is that no armor the ship can carry is of sufficient thickness to stop the high power projectiles.

The question now agitating the naval constructors is whether the efficiency of the fighting ship will not be increased by doing away with the armor weight, which amounts to about 30 per cent. of the displacement of the most recent vessels. This weight handicap, which makes the war vessel "loggy" in a seaway and perhaps dangerous, could be used in added gun and steam power.

It is argued by the no-armor crowd that the best defense of the vessel is in its own gun fire. If this can be made powerful enough the ship will need no other protection for it will be able to demoralize the enemy and prevent it from firing accurately enough to do any damage.

It is argued that the recent demonstrations in which the United States used the former battleship Texas as a target and the British demolished the Edinburgh showed that the cost and weight of armor are out of all proportion to its value as a protector. The high power shells were able to penetrate the steel walls without difficulty.

The first armored ships carried wrought iron protection. The Monitor and the Merrimack were the first on this side and the Warrior was the first British iron clad. The latter had 4.5 inch armor and its nine inch gun could penetrate eight inches of such armor at 3,000 yards. The present vessels have armor of from eighteen to twenty-four inches. The present 13 inch gun at 3,000 yards can penetrate about twenty-six inches of this protection, or what is equivalent to sixty-one inches of wrought iron. The century old struggle between the attack and the defense has been going steadily in favor of the attack.

First Tweed Trousers.
Sir Walter Scott's black and white tweed trousers figured in a paper dealing with the designing and coloring of Scotch tweeds read by Thomas Welsh at the opening session of the Textile congress at Harwick. The author was one of the earliest wearers of the tweed and the first pieces made were in the black and white design.

Colored checks were introduced by accident. A manufacturer had made a number of pieces and the white was so impure and soiled they could not be sold. Then some one suggested that if the pieces were dyed brown the defect would be covered. The suggestion was acted upon and a new check of black and brown was the result.

The new color was sent to London and sold rapidly. It was a short step to dye black and green and blue, and to make broken checks and the trade increased amazingly. Ideas for colors were collected in the bed of the River Garry and the pass of Killiecrankie. It was now possible for a lady to have a reversible skirt made up in such a way that she might appear at one time in a modest blue and at another in the tartan of her clan.—London News and Leader.

Recording Sea Temperatures.

The superintendent of the Johns Hopkins Botanical Gardens, William H. Witte, has given to the public his ingenious plan for automatically recording changes in sea temperature when a ship is passing through the ice fields. Water flows through a small tank in the bow of the vessel, in which three distinct appliances serve to record the changes of temperature. These include a high and low thermometer, a copper plate which, lengthening or shortening, operates a lever and records the changes of temperature on a revolving drum and series of tubes filled with alcohol, the tubes being connected by a small alcohol filled pipe with a diaphragm which, through a lever and a pen, also records the changes of temperature on a drum. All records may be read in the pilot house.—Scientific American.

Golf That Is Mostly Ball Hunting.

There are two sorts of golf. One is where you do not hunt for the ball. Those who play the other sort are never found in the championship records. They traverse the links with amateur caddies or with no caddies at all. They sally out in twos, threes or fours, and play all against all. They expect to spend most of the time in ball hunting, which they have reduced to a science. They spread out in a line and walk the suspected area, each rallying to the other's need. Only when the ball is found does the game continue, and the players are lucky if they do nine holes before luncheon.

Estimating.

They were coming down town in the Fifth avenue bus. "Do you know what, I'm juth crathy for?" lisped she to him. "One of thothe cute thapire and diamond ringth for the little finger. Would that be very expentive?" "That would depend," said he sagely, "on how large the sapphires and diamonds are." "Well," said she, considering, "I should thertainly want them large enough." Then, after a pause, "How much would that cotht?"—New York Evening Sun.
