Constance is the "baby," The activities of the girls-Prudence's work, Fairy's school affairs, the youngsters' pranks-and the family perplexities, make the story. It is simply a recital of homely incidents glorified by affection. The preceding installment described an accident which Prudence suffered during an early-morning bicycle ride and her rescue by a strange and fascinating young man.

For a moment he was puzzled. Then he burst out laughing. "I am afraid we had too much to talk about this morning. I thought I had explained my situation, but evidently I did not. I drove from Des Moines in the car,

"Yes, just so. I stopped at several nces on business as I came through. drove from Burlington this morning, but I got off the road. The car broke down on me, and I couldn't fix itbroke an axie. So I had to walk in. That is what I was seeing about today, sending a man out for the car and arranging about the repairs." He smiled again. "What in the world did you think I would walk from Des. Moines for?" he asked Prudence, more inquisitive than grammatical.

"I did not think snything about it until they asked, and-I did not know about the car. You did not mention

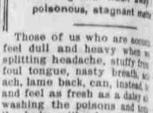

"No. I remember now. We were talking of other things all the time." He turned frankly to Mr. Starr. "Perhops you have heard of the Harmer Automobile company of Des Moines. My father was Harvey Harmer. Two years ago, when 1 was running around in Europe, he died. It was his desire that I should personally take charge of the business. So I hurried hounand have had charge of the company since then. We are establishing sale agencies here, and in Eurlington, and several other towns. I came out for a little trip, and took advantage of the opportunity to discuss the business with our new men. That's what brought me to Mount Murk."

For the first time in her life, Prudence distinctly triumphed over her father. She flushed him the giance of conqueror, and he modded, understandingly. He liked Jerrold Harmer, as much as he could like any mun who stepped seriously into the life of Prudence. He was glad that things word well, But-they would excuse him, he must look after his Sunday's sermons. A little later the twins and Connie grew restless, and finally Connie blurted out, "Say, Prue, don't you think

BE PRET HAIR UARK

Try Grandmother's old Favorite you say anything about falling in the Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compound-ed, brings back the natural color and to Prudence with never so much as a lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and trouble-Nowadays, by asking at any some. drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sul-hur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, im-need something over my nightgown, proved by the addition of other in-gredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one it, and-I'm twenty now. Do you think it would be all right? But it would be all right? your hair, as it does it so naturally evenly. You dampen a sponge or and soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small reply. "I'll have his automobile break down in the middle of the road, and Prudence can run into it. The carburetor came off, and of course the car wouldn't run an inch without it."

"Yes, that's good," said Carol approvingly. "It must be a sixty-cylinder, eight horse power-er-tonneau or something real big and costly,"

"Twins! You won't be ready," warned Prudence, and this dire possiing Cuticura your everyday toilet bility sent them flying upstairs in a panic.

While the girls, bubbling over with excitement, were dressing for the great event, Mr. Starr went downstairs to sit with Prudence. Carol called to him on his way down, and he paused on the staircase, looking up at her.

"Lark and I are going to use some of Fairy's powder, father," she said. "We feel that we simply must on an occasion like this. And for goodness' sake, don't mention it before him ! It doesn't happen very often, you know, but today we simply must. Now, don't flour barrel, or turning pale all of a sudden, whatever else you do. We'd be so mortified, father."

Mr. Starr was concerned with reproving shake of the head for the worldly-minded young twins,

"Father," began Prudence, her eyes on the lace coverlet, "do you think it You know, mother said I was to have it would be all right? But if you do not want me to wear it-"

"I do want you to," was the prompt wearing it. Til get it out of the trunk myself, and send Fairy down to help you." Then us he turned toward the door, he asked carelessly, "Is he very good-looking, Prudence?"

And Prudence, with a crimson face, answered quickly, "Oh, I really didn't notice, father."

ently Fairy came down with the dainty silk gown trimmed with fine soft lace. "I brought my lavender ribbon for your hair, Prudence. It will match the tell you that. Now I must hurry and finish my own dressing."

But with her foot on the bottom stair, she paused. Her sister was calling after her. "Send father down here, quick, Fairy."

Futher ran down quickly, and Prudence, catching hold of his hands. whispered wretchedly, "Oh, father, he waited, breathless. Nor was he long in finding her among the bevy of girls. He walked at once to the bed, and took her hand.

"My little comrade of the road," he said gayly, but with tenderness. "I'm afraid you are not feeling well enough for callers today."

"Oh, yes, I am," protested Prudence with strange shyness.

He turned to the other girls, and greeted them easily. He was entirely self-possessed. "Miss Starr told me so much about you that I know you all to begin with." He smiled at Fairy as he added, "In fact, she predicted that I am to fall in love with you. And so, very likely, I should, if I hadn't met your sister first." They all laughed at that, and then he walked back and stood by Prudence once more. "Was it a bad sprain? Does it pain you very badly? You look tired. I am afraid it was an imposition for me to come this afternoon."

"Oh, don't worry about that," put in Connie anxiously. "She wanted you to come. She's been getting us ready for you ever since the doctor left. I think it was kind of silly for me to wear my blue just for one caller." The twins glared at her, realizing that she was discrediting the parsonage, but Jerrold Harmer laughed, and Prudence joined him.

"It is quite true," she admitted frankly. "The mule and I disgraced the parsonage this morning, and I wanted the rest of you to redeem it this afternoon." She looked at him inquiringly. "Then you had another coat?"

"No, I didn't. I saw this one in a window this morning, and couldn't resist it. Was the ride very hard on your ankle?"

Mr. Starr was puzzled. Evidently it was not lack of funds which brought this man on foot from Des Moines to Mount Mark, half-way across the state! He did not look like a man fleeing from justice. What, then, was the explanation?

"You must have found it rather a long walk," he began tentatively, his eyes on the young man's face.

"Yes, I think my feet are a little blistered. I have walked farther than that many times, but I am out of practice now. Sometimes, however, walking is a painful necessity."

"How long did it take you coming from Des Moines to Mount Mark?" inquired Carol in a subdued and respectful voice, and curious, withal,

"From Des Molnes," he gasped. "Good heavens! 1 did not walk from Des Moines! Did you-" He turned to Prudence questioningly, "Did you think I walked clear from Des Moines?"

"Yes." And added hastily, "But I the mod-looking. I-I did notice did not care if you did. It did not as this, but they gladly availed themselves of Connie's "break," and followed her out-of-doors. Then Fairy got up, laughing. "I have done my share, too, I think we'll leave the parsonage in your hands now, Prue, I want to write to Aunt Grace. I'll be just at the head of the stairs, and if Prudence wants me, you will call, won't you, Mr. Harmer? And won't you stay for dinner with us? I'm sure to disgrace the parsonage again, for I am no cook, but you can get along for once, surely. We spend more time laughing when the food is bad, and laughter is very healthful. You will stay, won't you?" Jerrold Harmer looked very eager, and yet he looked somewhat doubtfully at Prudence. Her eyes were eloquent with entreatles. Finally he laughed, and said, "I should certainly like to stay, but you see I want to come back tomorrow. Now, will I dare to come back tomorrow if I stay for dinner tonight? Wouldn't Connie say that was disgracing the parsonage?"

Fairy laughed delightedly. "That is very good," she said, "Then you will stay, I'll try to fix it up with Connie to save the reputation of the house."

No, they did not quote poetry, they did not discuss the psychological intricacies of spontaneous attraction, they did not say anything deep, or wise, or learned. But they smilled at each other, with pleased investigating eyes. He put his hand on the coverlet, just near enough to touch the lace on the sleeve of her silk dressing gown. And together they found paradise in the shabby sitting room of the old Methodist parsonage that afternoon.
